CONCORD, SEPT., 22, 1896.

The Standard Monday told of Mr. Lee Sapp's unhappy experience with his dog. The first impulse under such circumstances is to kill the dog. We hope Mr. Sapp did not kill his. Under such circumstances it is better to capture the dog if possible and see if hydrophobia exists. If the dog lives more than nine or ten days it never had hydrophobia and the bitten person can feel safe, but if hydrophobia developed in the dog and killed him, then the bitten person may justly feel some uneasiness and some unsafety, though only a small percentage of bitten people take hydrophobia, probably not more than 3 or 4 in 100.

We do not know that any scientist has ever revealed the earliest possible stage of germination in corn. We are accustomed to think that the ear should be well ripe when plucked, or germination can not be expected. Such seems now an error. Our former neighbor, Mr. George Walter, discovered that the cob from which the corn had been cut some days before as a roasting ear, was well covered on one side with little sprouts grown out from the kernels that had not been scraped out from the cob. Thus it is proven that a very small part of a grain contains the germ as the peeling of a potato does and that ripening is not necessary to the existence of the fertile germ but only to protect it.

Now comes along somebody that has discovered what is termed magical powder which, mixed with sulphate of zinc, has the power of absorbing light and of giving it off in the dark; but thus far scientific utility seems to hold this luminous powder sacred to the use of the new woman and dusts it freely on the bicycle girl who searches through the streets at night with no fear of arrest for want of a lamp and thus further transforms herself into an angel of light as fit to cleave your head if you don't stand aside, as she is of piercing your heart if you have not the inside track on that other fellow.

Mr. R. C. Blackwelder reports to us that he has a number of peach trees that have a second crop of peaches this year. He says they are about the size of a man's thumb and he thinks will mature well enough to be eaten. THE STANDARD would gently remind Mr. Blackwelder that the "proof of pudding is in chewing the bag" and we hope to be further impressed with the partiality of Nature in giving him two crops of peaches while many a fellow just as jovial as himself got no crop at all.

Our readers probably crave a variety of intellectual morsels and we fancy that we get in a few thoughts today in the interests of science, though it may be difficult to discern just where the science comes in in the railroad collision. The fatalities were surely not very scientific. The communication, we think, may be classed as "right good reading." We agree with the writer that when railroad collisions are on hand it is well to be as far away as possible.

The Discovery Saved His Life.

Mr. G. Calloutte, Druggist at Beaverville, Ill., says: To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it. Get a free trial at Fetzer's Drug Store.

A 400-Pound Cone of Gold Bullion.

A cone of gold bullion that weighed 4,747 ounces was turned in yesterday at the Assay Office in this city. It came from the Caribou Hydraulic mine in British Columbia, and was 12½ inches in height and 9½ inches across the base, in the shape of the vessel in which it was melted. Officials at the Assay Office thought that it would assay at least $18 an ounce, and said that it was the largest chunk of gold they had ever received.—New York Sun.

Strange Indeed.

An engineer on the S. A. L., whose veracity cannot be doubted, relates a strange coincident, which happened in this town last Monday. He says he was walking along First street, and just as he got opposite Capt. T. F. Anderson's residence, he heard something fall just in front of him, and upon investigation, he found it was a brand new silver quarter. He looked around and not seeing any one near, could not imagine where it came from.

So you see, we are destined to have free silver. If the American people will not vote for us to have it, it will fall from the skies. Old Hanna and all his gold cannot keep it back. It's coming just as sure as you are living.—Weldon News.

Help Wanted.

Agents wanted to sell Macintoshes and Rubber Clothing, Tires, and a full line of Rubber Goods. (Part or all of). Free samples, and protected ground to workers. Factory P. O. 1371, New York.

Clumsily Worded.

Curiously worded advertisements, which are funny without intent, are more common in the London papers, it would seem, than they are in New York publications. An English periodical offered a prize the other day for the best collection of such announcements, and the following is the result:

"Annual sale now on. Don't go elsewhere to be cheated—come in here." "A lady wants to sell her piano, as she is going abroad in a strong iron frame."

"Wanted, experienced nurse for bottled baby." "Furnished apartments suitable for gentlemen with folding doors."

"Wanted a room by two gentlemen about thirty feet long and twenty feet broad." "Lost, a collie dog by a man on Saturday answering to Jim with a brass collar round his neck and a muzzie."

"Wanted, by a respectable girl, her passage to New York, willing to take care of children and a good sailor." "For sale—a pianoforte, the property of a musician with carved legs."

"A boy wanted who can open oysters with a reference." "Bulldog for sale; will eat anything; very fond of children."

"Wanted an organist, and a boy to blow the same." "Wanted a boy to be partly outside and partly behind the counter."—Ex.

Beautiful eyes grow dull and dim
As the swift years steal away.
Beautiful, willowy forms so slim
Lose fairness with every day.
But she still is queen and hath charms to spare
Who wears youth's coronal—beautiful hair.

Preserve Your Hair

and you preserve your youth. "A woman is as old as she looks," says the world. No woman looks as old as she is if her hair has preserved its normal beauty. You can keep hair from falling out, restoring its normal color, or restore the normal color to gray or faded hair, by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor.
