How history does repeat itself! A campaign collector sending round his hat to postmasters is clearly a replica of William Tell and Gessler's hat in connection with a pole. Philadelphia Times.

Now that there's evidently an end of that pigeon post from Ladysmith, rumors are beginning to fly about.—Philadelphia Times.

For Stealing Candy.
Late last Saturday evening Berry Cruse, a negro boy, attempted to steal a box of candy at Sappenfield's when no one was noticing him, but little Oscar Sappenfield had been keeping his eye on him, and told of the theft. A search was made and the negro had the candy. He was confined in jail to await further action at Monday morning's court.

He was most too large to let go with a good whipping, especially in a case of this kind, and hence he was bound over to court. In default of a bond he was sent to jail.
