There never was a time in the history of this country when a dollar would buy more than it will to-day. The necessaries of life are food, clothes and shelter. Materials that go into buildings are not at their lowest point, but they are very cheap compared with averages in the past. Clothing is practically at bedrock figures. "Meat is as low as it has been in thirty years. Breadstuffs are away down. Coffee and tea are no longer luxuries, because their low prices have brought people to consider them necessities. Sugar has never cost less. Yet to-day, though the refiners are undoubtedly making a good deal more than that eighth, they are selling nearer twentyfive pounds for s dollar, and their output has been enormously increased. The course of sugar is illustrative of many other articles whose price has been reduced and whose consumption has been multiplied by ten.

"Finally, the United States has no serious difficulties in sight. At peace with all the world and likely to remain so, our people can hardly get up a quarrel among themselves. The silver question was a bugbear for a time, but the indications are that it has spent its force and will not again threaten the stability of our currency. Under all these circumstances, is it too much to say that the good times have actually minister to our pleasure, our comfort or arrived?"
