Search For Indian Mound.

Fayetteville, N. C., April 9 (By the Associated Press).—A "King Tut's" tomb in North Carolina, not of such ancient date as the one in Egypt, but of pre-revolutionary days and made by Indians, is being searched for in the vicinity of Fort Bragg, Uncle Sam's artillery post just north of the city... Range riders recently have found a number of Indian arrow heads of pe culiar design on the government reser vation. All are of materials foreign to this part of the country. Two of the arrow heads are of flint, one of an unusual kind of sandstone and the balance of a quartz substance, not unlike granite in appearance. None of the stones, with the possible exception of the standstone point, is like any others found in this section of North Carolina. A belief prevails at the post that there is an Indian mound near the spot where the objects were picked up and a search for its location now is
