The release date for the cotton crop estimates announced for November 1st by the United States Department of Agriculture last week has been changed to November 2nd on account of the New Orleans exchange being closed November 1st, a legal holiday in Louisiana, according to an announcement here by Frank Parker, of the Federal-State Crop Reporting Service.

The release will cover the condition and the forecast production as of October 25th. An inquiry being sent out by Mr. Parker covers the average yield per acre of lint cotton, the per centage of the total crop picked by October 25th, the average number of bolls to the plant that are safe, including those already picked, the average distance between cotton rows and also between the plants in the row. The questionnaire also calls for the per centage of abandonment from July 25th to October 25th. The item of abandonment covers the total failure or the per centage of average on which no cotton will be picked.

The release of the papers will include, said Mr. Parker, features of all the items mentioned for North Carolina and will follow immediately the November 2nd release by the Washington office of the entire belt.

An extensive inquiry will be made the latter part of November concerning the combative methods employed this year in controlling the boll weevil damage, announced Mr. Parker. The questionnaire, he said, will go to 200,000 cotton farmers and specialists of the South.

Orvis Brothers and Company Cotton Letter.

New York, Oct. 23.—The cotton market seems an airtight proposition insofar as heavy sales fail to make but slight impression upon quotations. Ready demand appears as each offer is made and to all indications people absorbing the sales are powerful. The floating supply of contracts in this market has dwindled to small proportions and built for the occasional appearance of one trader or another who is willing to liquidate a more or less important line together with such hedge sales as come into the market there is but little resistance to a continued perpendicular rise of quotations so it seems. Frost over the entire northern portion of the belt strengthened bullish confidence and continued demand in Liverpool led foreign market at the higher range of prices was also encouraging especially in view of the announced increase of spinning by Manchester. It shows that for one cause or another traders are willing to manifest their great confidence in ultimately higher prices by continued accumulation of spot cotton and contracts despite the fact that spinners claim and probably experience a severe disparity between cotton and cloth. It is certain that the quantity of supplies is an immovable fact until a new year comes around but the price level at which spinners may dispose of their products is movable and to all appearances the public will be forced to pay the bill for higher cotton, January Liverpool due Wednesday 16.95.
