CHEATED THROUGH STOCKINGS AT HER MID-YEAR EXAMINATION

Ministerial Student Discovered a Co-El Had Answers to the Tests Written on Her Flesh.

Buckhannon, W. Va., Dec. 27 .-- The female of he specties may or may not be more deadly than the male, but members of the faculty of West Virginia Wesleyan are convinced she's a big sight cleverer. The faculty members found strong evidence of cheating in a mid-semester examination, but a cariful watch failed to disclose who was doing it or how it was done. The faculty and the student body then combined in an effort to stop dishonest practices.

Evidences of trickery continued, but nothing came of all efforts at detection until the other day when a young ministerial student made a startling disterial student made a starting the covery. A certain girl, who was taking a test in chemistry, was wearing flesh-tinted stockings of extremely thin tinted stockings of extremely that the material and it was observed that the frequently peered studiously at her trim nkles. There appeared to be remarkable inspiration in those ankles, for them the girl would write energetically. Watching his chance, the ministerial student took a look himself. Nothing something peculiar, he peered still more close'y and discovered there was writing on the skin beneath the transparent hosiery. By drawing the fabric tight the writing became plainly legible. Whether co-eds will have to submit to inspections before examinations after is not stated.
