was unreel in one hour and 23 minutes. The figure three had a big hand in the victory for the visitors, and it might be said that it was a regular jinx for the local club. The three errors accounted in a large measure for the three runs the Highlanders accumulated in the third inning to win the game.

The scoring started after Cox had whiffed the breeze. Kracke went to first on Laird's error, Combs singled and Knox was safe at first when Haynes errored a grounder, Kracke scoring. Wolfe, hurler, doubled and Combs scored. While trying to catch Knox napping off third, Donaldson threw wild, and the third run of the frame checked in at home.

Kannapolis scored in the first inning when Mottisinger, first up, was hit by a pitched ball, went to second on Haynes' sacrifice, and scored on Irb's double to center field.

An interesting point in connection with the game is that the first six outs made by Kannapolis came from seven pitched balls. Lefty Cress, for a while with the first half champ Capitals of the Piedmont league, hurled three balls in the first inning for three outs, each being knocked to the infield. In the second frame, four balls were thrown and three outs resulted.

Spees Wolfe, the Lee Meadows of the Highlanders, was routed Friday 9-0, but he came back strong today and was invincible. He kept the blows allowed Kannapolis widely scattered, and was in rare form. Only two men secured more than one hit, the opposing first sackers, Laird and Combs, being the fortunate players.

Mottisinger, with a tap for one base in the eighth frame, ran his record of hitting safely in consecutive games up to nineteen. Fans are pulling for him to continue his hitting, and establish a new record.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

James E. Wales, editor of the Berkeley, California, Gazette, says: That if you are trying to reach an intelligent newspaper audience, a bona fide advertisement over your firm name is worth infinitely more to your business than publicity articles in the news columns.

Publicity, like public speaking and community singing, was made incurable by the Great War.

It has become the bane of existence of newspaper editors.

It has prostituted the news columns and threatens the integrity of the press, because it has come to take a place with news in many of our small and some of our large newspapers.

Intelligent readers of newspapers are coming to distinguish "publicity" from news and they resent its presence in the news columns because they recognize its purpose and are aware of the deception.

Publicity may continue to deceive the ignorant readers for an indefinite period, but the time is not far removed when thinking people will demand its segregation and identification.

It must go the way of the "medicine ad" or the newspaper will sacrifice what remnant of power it now has to "mould public opinion."

Think it over, Mr. Advertiser, and then try telling newspaper readers the merits of your goods over or under your firm name. They will respect you the more for your honesty and frankness and by living up to your promises, and if you gain their confidence, you will win their patronage, which will be much more substantial and lasting than that gained by publicity means.

LETTER FROM MR. CALDWELL

Finds Crops in Cabarrus More Uniform Than Elsewhere.

Laurinburg, N. C., June 30, 1927. Dear Mr. Sherrill: We left Concord at 8 o'clock, came by Monroe and Wadesboro, found the roads excellent, arrived in Laurinburg at 11:30, stopped in Rockingham about 30 minutes, so we made the 100 miles in three hours. Old Henry was running as good when we got here as when we started. All stood the trip fine, found Wilton and Johnnie (Johnnie is his wife) well. The crops, especially the cotton, are very poor in some parts of the county on account of a severe hail storm about a month ago. A number of the farmers planted over and the dry weather set in, so the cotton is just up and a very poor stand. A number of the truckers are busy shipping cucumbers. That crop is fine, so is the cantaloupe crop and watermelon. They will begin shipping cantaloupes next week. I find some of our Concord boys down here, employed on the road construction. That court scandal we read about, public sentiment is about two-thirds in favor of the boys. Could tell you more that would convince you. I made a trip to Statesville last week, and the crops were all very late and in poor condition.

I have just had a conversation with an old Confederate veteran, Peter McIntosh. He told me of the wind and sand storms they have here in March that are very damaging to the crops this year as the storms were in May. You find in these big fields acres that were covered with the sand and there is not any cotton in those places. And another drawback was the lice that have killed great patches. While writing here close to the road you see hundreds of wagons loaded with nitrate of soda.

So in my travels I find the most uniform crops in Cabarrus county. We leave for home Friday morning.

Yours truly, R. V. CALDWELL.

Have You Heard This One?

Perhaps He'd Washed It. Little Pewee walked into a coal company office one morning, and was asked by a bookkeeper, "Who's this?" To which he replied: "I'm Pewee." Again the bookkeeper questioned: "How do I know you're Pewee?" To which Pewee responded: "I can't reckon I got my own face on, ain't I?"

Couldn't See The Point. "Is that chick right?" asked the visitor who had already outstayed his welcome. His hostess groaned. "Oh, no," she said. "That's the clock we call 'The Visitor'." The boss set down again. "What a curious name to give a clock." His hostess ventured an explanation. "You see," she cooed sweetly, "we call it that because we can never make it go."

Bright Student. Professor—"If you wanted to make a salt solution in a hurry, would you use hot or cold water?" Student—"I'd use cold!" Professor—"Cold! But why cold?" Student—"Well, if I was in a hurry, I wouldn't want to take the time to heat the water."

Suffering Bringett Understanding. Small Joan was enjoying her first big family dinner. A doting grandmother on one side and an adoring wofan aunt on the other, with each insisting other in seeing that the small one missed none of the good things on the table, and Joan did ample justice to the service. Marooned in the food tray a conversation that flowed around the big table, Joan maintained a busy silence, but when, toward the end of the meal, a full came, she pushed back her plate, and carefully adjusting her small body to a more comfortable posture, said: "I'll never blow another rubber balloon! I know just how it feels!"
