Dancing was the main feature of the evening, although an enjoyable musical program was rendered by Miss Harper, who is a talented musician on the piano. Archie Earnhardt, possessor of a rare tenor voice, sang several solos.

Miss Dorothy Hethcock, sister of the hostess, was assisted in serving delectable refreshments by Miss Maude Goodman to about twenty guests.

Two-eights of women recently raced over the Thames course from Putney to Mortlake. This is the first time women's crews have rowed the course made famous by the annual Oxford-Cambridge varsity race. The winning crew of women covered the distance (about four and a half miles) in 27 minutes 37 seconds.

VERY CHAMPION MOWER

scientific advantages make it a better mower matter how tough or heavy the your Avery-Champion Mower runs smoothly. Not new, but year after year to age. The reason is that it is strong where strength is needed. vital points are doubly protected against wear and breakage. points are:

One-piece, drop-forged steel. No wood to break; no rivets of wood to wear loose.

Extra long, drop-forged, heat-treated steel knife-head; extra hard spring point. Length avoids wear; hardness resists wear.

Closed end, non-heating pitman bearing; retains constant of oil; runs in oil and doesn't get.

(4) Independent, angular cutter bar adjustment and knife registration; clean cutting at any angle of cutter bar.

Avery-Champion good work, absence of trouble and satisfaction come from sturdy, simple, modern design; best materials and careful workmanship. Avery-Champion Mower is backed by two famous names and a century of implement building experience.

Prize Winning Essay In The "Better Homes" Campaign Here

The following is one of the prize essays submitted during the "Better Homes" campaign here, having been written by Mrs. W. F. Eddleman on the subject, "A Parent's Duty and the Child's Rights".

The parent's duty and the child's rights is such a weighty subject that I hesitate to write at all; but after man and wife have fulfilled the duty of becoming parents, then comes the duty of bringing up the child, and in the meanwhile setting an example worthy for the child to emulate. In other words, parents should so live every day that as the children grow up they will not be ashamed to see them living and doing the same things they have seen their parents do before them.

I saw in a magazine the other day the picture of a pretty babe, marching forth, and back of the babe were the parents, grandparents, great-grandparents, etc.—just a host of ancient ancestors, all looking so different. Below the picture were the words, "How does he get that way?" meaning the baby. When we stop and think of the different characteristics, etc., that each tiny infant inherits, we surely can say, the time to begin to train a child is generations before it is born. So the duty of parents reaches much farther than just to their own children. The influence of each individual lives on and on in the lives of others, and especially is it true in regard to parents and their children. It is the duty of parents to be the very best in their power, physically, mentally, morally and spiritually, for every child has the right to inherit these attributes, and really should have them to begin a fair start in the world. It is the duty of parents to give each child the very best care and attention. First, physically. Because a sound body and mind is needed to meet and cope with the many trials in life. Second, mentally. Each child has the right to be sent to school, church and other places where the growth of the mind will be helped in the right way. Third, morally. Each child should be taught to live clean, wholesome, honest lives in all their thoughts, words and deeds. Fourth, Last but not least, is the spiritual rights of the child. Our children should be taught to love God above everything else and his neighbor as himself. Children should be taught to honor and respect their parents and superiors.

It is the duty of parents to help each child receive good instruction, give them help and inspiration to gain a good education, to provide good literature in the home and eliminate that which should be avoided. They should help the children to overcome the faults and passions and to strive to become more like "The One Perfect Man" daily.

The child has rights that are all its own, very personal and individual.

Some parents try to completely efface the will of the child by their own will. This is not right—neither is it fair to the child. Their wills and desires should not be made light of, or put aside as childish and insignificant. Parents should remember that "From little acorns great oaks grow." Parents should never punish a child when angry because your passion may have greater control of your actions than your reason, and that would be unjust to the child. But children should receive just punishment when unruly or disobedient. We should talk to the child and be sure they see wherein they have erred, and help them to be truly repentant and sorry for the wrong committed. Continued harsh punishment will harden a child, so we must not forget to rule with love and kindness, using patience and perseverance daily. Obedience should be taught to the child from infancy.

It is the duty of parents to provide for their children, teaching them to help to provide for themselves as they grow older, developing the self reliance, confidence and independence of the child. Parents should not give their children too much money, etc., without some special service rendered for the favor bestowed, thereby teaching them the value of money and service. Parents should teach the children the value of good character, time, money and good friends. Teach them that "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches." Children have the right to look to their parents for true guidance, instruction and maintenance, and at all times the parents should set an example of right living, daily in the home, and the world in general, worthy of example.

Children should be taught to work and learn the true reward of honest labor. They should be taught to love, serve and give, that they may feel the true joy and peace that comes in the breast when true service and sacrifice is rendered.

It is the duty of parents to take a deep interest in churches, schools and all civic and embetterment transactions, and help to make their community, state and nation a better and safer place for the foundation of true Christian homes, ideal for the training of boys and girls to be the very best men and women possible.

A nation is no more or less than what the parents of that nation make it, so it is the parent's duty to be foresighted, broad minded, unselfish, willing to serve and sacrifice, to reach the high standard whereunto Jesus Christ has called us. With a far vision and faith in a future that a better day than any yet shall dawn, and peace shall reign over all the earth.

Tibet is called the roof of the world.
