india With World's Largest Cow Pop ulation Forced to Import Canned Milk For Its Needs.

India, according to T. R. Pirtle, in his recent book, "History of the Dairy Industry," finds itself in the peculiar position of having more cows than any other country in the world, and, at the same time, having to import canned milk to take care of its needs.

With a population of 300,000,000 Indian has a cattle population of around 160,000,000. Estimating one- Walter Blue and Barney Batten, the half of this number as cows, there latter two married men, have waived would be one cow to every four per-

So, barring out the Hindus, it is estimated that only one-fourth of the inhabitants of Indian use milk. On this basis, there is one cow to each milk consumer, or four times as many as in the United States.
