OH HOW GLOOMY.

The Republican thermometer in this section, which has been charged with Grant mercury, and reputed to have stood at 96 in the shade, sank to 40 degrees below zero, when the news that Garfield was nominated spread abroad.

The negroes swear that Mrs Grant has been treated badly, and they will not support the nominee of a drunken mob.

Not only is Stokes dissatisfied, but from Hatters to the Alleghenies, the cry is "where did he come from?"

One good old Deacon in the party wanted to know "where in the D. will they find this man Arthur?"

Gentlemen, these are your best and ablest Statesmen. They are your headlights to dispel the gloom that hangs in front of the Radical Railway; and with such lights, showing the dangers to be encountered, are you willing to risk your reputation on that train.

The Odin of the Republican party has passed away. His body will be embalmed with the Gods that fell in the St. Louis whisky struggle; but his followers will not be there to mourn his demise!

"Away with these men! we claim no such leaders! we will seek to restore ourselves in another house, even the house of Jacob."

The floods of disaster are pouring upon us from the North and the East, and the last wave on the 6th of November will submerge it forever.

STOKES HAS THOUSANDS.

The Greensboro Patriot says that "the Greensboro Spoke and Handle Factory, and the North Carolina Handle Company located here are doing an extensive business. A few days ago the former shipped a car load of spokes and handles to California, one to England and are now preparing to send a car-load to Russia.

What a country is this county of Stokes! Here we have any quantity of the finest timber in the world. No sooner than our railroad is completed we will be in an attitude to supply the wants of the world with handles, spokes, and fine building timber.

"A CALL FROM THE FRONTIER.—We are sorely in need of a preacher, but we don't want any cheap trash. We want a good, muscular Christian, who can snatch sinners by the scruff of the neck and drag them howling up the plane of righteousness, and who will not drink more than he can hold.

A Voice From Vermont.

The most admirable view of the political field and the demands of the country that we have met with is in a long and able letter that appears in the Bennington (Vermont) Reformer, from the pen of Mr. E. J. Phelps, a distinguished gentleman of that State.

Referring to machine politics and machine politicians, Mr. Phelps says:

"It has seemed to me as an observer, merely of what is going on, that politicians on both sides are not giving heed enough to the signs of the times. They are so accustomed, in the pursuit of their vocation, to see the genuine public sentiment of the country overwhelmed by a spurious public sentiment, manufactured to order, and maintained by newspaper clamor, that they can hardly believe the independent intelligence of the people is ever likely to assert itself against party dictation.

"I hope and believe that in this instance they are mistaken. Public exigencies have lately been so serious, threatening dangers so imminent, political questions have been brought so near in their consequences to the homes and business of men, that popular feeling is beginning to be aroused, and the situation of a class of voters attracted who have usually little or no concern with what is called 'practical politics'.

"There are indications of a wide spread upheaval in the better intelligence of the land, against this condition of affairs. Unorganized and unconcentrated it is true, and therefore making but small external show against the serried ranks of the politicians.

"If either party should be sagacious enough to respond to this demand, and to retire for the time being their professional candidates in favor of some statesman of tried ability and experience, and unquestionable character, the result, as against the party taking an opposite course, would be a foregone conclusion.

"A CALL FROM THE FRONTIER.—We are sorely in need of a preacher, but we don't want any cheap trash. We want a good, muscular Christian, who can snatch sinners by the scruff of the neck and drag them howling up the plane of righteousness, and who will not drink more than he can hold.

James A. Garfield for President

Gen. James A. Garfield of Ohio was nominated for President by the Convention at Chicago on the thirty sixth ballot yesterday. In making this nomination, the supporters of Mr. Blaine took the lead, and the other anti-Grant elements in the Convention promptly followed.

In considering this nomination, we desire first of all to thank God for the defeat of Grant and the decisive overthrow of the Third Term conspiracy. It is an event on which the American people in a body may well offer up rejoicings to Heaven; and the friends of liberty and of the rights of men in all nations under the sun, should join with them in the manifestations of their heart felt gratitude.

But is Gen. Garfield such a man that patriotic citizens of the United States can well and wisely support him for President? Can the executive authority of the republic be safely intrusted to him? These are the questions which every voter should now ask; and we answer calmly and emphatically that he is not such a man.

The character of Gen. Garfield can be judged by the following conspicuous facts:

When, in 1872 the Credit Mobilier bribery and corruption among members of Congress were first exposed, Gen. Garfield was one among those accused. He immediately published a letter expressly and positively denying that he had any share in it.

But on Jan. 23 next following, the Hon. Oakes Ames was examined before the same committee, and proved by record evidence, partly in Gen. Garfield's own handwriting, that Gen. Garfield had had stock in the Credit Mobilier, and that he had received dividends thereupon.

A perjurer, and a man who attempts to suborn perjury, is not fit to be President.

One other important feature in the history of Gen. Garfield is his relation to the De Golyer paving contract. One De Golyer had made a contract with the Shephard Ring in Washington to put down a quantity of patent pavement.

And yet, notwithstanding all this, the mischief of electing such a man President would all seem blessings compared to the results which would have followed the success of Grant and the third term.

The North Carolina Presbyterian says: "The vitality of Jews, compared with that of Christians, from tables of vital statistics made up from observation in the great centres of civilization, England, Germany, France, etc., show in the first five years of life of a hundred Jewish children twelve die; of one hundred Christian children twenty-four die.

LET IT BE REPAIRED.

We are reliably informed that the bridge across Town Fork, just beyond Dr. Lash's, is in a dangerous condition. This is a bridge along the main thoroughfare between Stokes and Winston, across which a majority of our farmers go to market, and it is the height of folly to let this structure remain in a condition perilous to both man, beast and property.

It has always been our misfortune to pursue that course which our own conscience said was right, however wrong it might appear to others, and we trust we shall never depart from the custom.

We believe this government was formed by the people, for the people, that the masses are the sovereigns and the officials the servants; that all men are, and of a right should be free. Believing this we shall ever do all we can to belittle all rings and Court House factions—anything that may take from our people the right of designating their own leader.

The time for politics to take an upward tendency is approaching, and we trust every man will come up and let his voice be heard.

Whispering in a sleeper's ear will often produce a dream," says an English proverb.
