Ida. (Aside.) I become bewildered cases,

ADVENT,

The time is drawing near When Thou, Lord, shalt appear. My soul, in coming near, Approach with holy fear!

Soon now the call shall come; The dead shall hear and rise-To all the call shall come,
To stand before Thine eyes! Oh. look. Thou, not on me

With a consuming fire-Blasting what is in me Before a judgment dire? Let Mercy own me Thine. Through Faith in saving power; That makes my poor cross Thine, And brings the Christian dower.

So shall I reach the joy Defore Thy sacred thron Thy promised holy joy,
The bliss of Thee alone,

AN EPISODE-FROM LOVE IN DEATH: BY WILLIAM SHARSWOOD. Ida. (Aside.) 'Tis sttrange-Ida

Ameloc-but then my lover's name was Lichael Bonasse, -not Michael Cabale. Mich. And I continued, without eaving uncle time for childing me, that or all her name is Amelot, she nas a mand and heart! "Ab, yes! I don't doubt but you think so-and if our family used to have sad wranglings, it is no reason that the effect of the evil should descend like an heirloom to our children. But is your affection paid in return, as we used to say?" Really, uncle, that is just what I wish to learn; for I do not know that she even suspects me of loving her. "You know very little of the sex, to know so little--she knew it as soon as yourself," said he. 'Well," he continued, "there are some chances against her being yours. You know of the family dissensions, and I doubt if your uncle will bestow his nephew upon her." Well then, uncle, there's only one course for me to choose. 'Nonsense!" said he, "don't commit any folly, but follow my course." Very well, uncle. "In the first place you cannot marry at eighteen." he continued. Why not? "Because I won't allow you, and if you cross my admonitions you will lose my aid, and this marriage will never take place at all." He continued-"now, if the girl loves you, and should be willing to wait three years for you -" Three years! said I. Uncle reassured me, "if I began to argue about it, he would desist from lending me any aid whatever," at the same time declaring as before, that "without his aid the marriage would never take place. If she will wait," he went on, "you can join a regiment, and thus fulfil your uncle Joseph's wishes. But not at Cherbourg! at another hour.
