

A DISAPPOINTED CITIZEN.
Charlotte Observer.

The following comes from the Greenville Reflector:

A man who since the advent of Populism in Pitt county has been one of its prominent agitators, on Saturday expressed himself as disappointed and disgusted at the course of the Legislature. He said he voted the ticket with the expectation of seeing many reforms enacted, but sees that absolutely nothing has been done in that direction. He said further that many men left the Democratic party because of the idea that a few bosses led and controlled that party, but admitted that the present Legislature was the worst boss-ridden body he ever saw. He frankly expressed the belief that he had made a mistake in the course he had pursued, and said many others in the county who supported the Populist ticket were of the same opinion.

If this good man had read the Democratic papers and heard the Democratic speakers, he and his neighbors, he and they would find no occasion, in the results of the legislation of the past sixty days for disappointment. They had opportunity to read and to hear that there was nothing in the government of North Carolina to reform, and further, that there was never such a system of bossism known on the continent as that by which the Populist party of North Carolina is dominated.

The truth of both these statements should be apparent to everybody now. We congratulate the Pitt man and his neighbors upon being among the first to get their eyes open.

CLAUDE MEEKER, consul at Bradford, reports that woolen cloth manufactured in the United States is being sold in England at prices which astonish the natives. This is one of the first results of the new tariff law, and it goes to show that freedom in trade is the correct principle; for the nearer a country comes to its more markets it finds opening up to it. Of course we can never have free trade in this country, the theory of the government being that the bulk of its revenues must be obtained from imports, but the closer we approximate it the wider becomes the field for our products.

The Republicans are undertaking to prove that the last was another billion dollar Congress, but Chairman Sayers, of the appropriations committee, will not permit them to do it. He says the total appropriations of the Fifty-third Congress were $990,338,691, while those of the Fifty-second or Reed Congress were $1,027,104,527. It would not have been surprising if the Congress just adjourned had provided for as large expenditures as its predecessor did—this would have proved nothing against it nor anything in favor of the Fifty-second; for this is a rapidly growing country and the tendency to constantly increasing government expenses is inevitable. The last Congress therefore made a fine record for economy when it cut the appropriations below those made by its predecessor. It would have done well, in view of the increasing demands of two years' growth, had it held them at the same figure.

SENATE REORGANIZATION.

In Any Case It Does Not Seem Likely the Democrats Can Re-Organize.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The renewed talk of an extra session to be called on account of the exhaustion of the gold reserve is worth very little, because in the recent private sale of bonds for gold arrangements were perfected which will probably prevent much exhaustion. However that may be, whenever the new Senate shall meet whether in extra or regular session, the gossip speculate over the question of re-organization, and among the prominent officials at the capitol on the Senate side, the following is offered as the very latest and most plausible calculation: Republican Senators 42; Democratic Senators 39; Populist Senators 2. (Jones and Stewart, of Nevada.) One Senator from Delaware (Higgins) is omitted. If, as seems likely, this vacancy continues, it will take 44 to make a majority of the Senate, and the Republicans will lack two and the Democrats five of having it. If, on the contrary, all of Addick's schemes to keep out Higgins or anybody else, and force the matter over until the next Legislature, shall fail, and a Senator be chosen, the majority will be forty-five and the Republicans be short three votes and the Democrats six. There is not the remotest chance for all six of the Populist and silver Senators to coalesce with the Democrats. Marion Butler's recent denial that he intended to sit on the Republican side, etc., need hardly be extended to imply that he will "co-operate" with the party he has recently been fighting. As for Peffer, scarcely anyone here, except a few interested in keeping the present organization intact by his vote, expects him to stand by the Democrats or to hold off altogether. So, his vote and Marion Butler's are pretty sure to go to the Republicans. The votes of Allen, Kyle, Jones and Stewart may be given to sustain the present arrangement. It is certainly possible. Their votes would not be sufficient to prevent a re-organization. If they should go to the Democrats the latter would still be one short in the event the Delaware seat remains vacant. Two short otherwise.

"JUST AS I AM."

The History of the Familiar Hymn Impressively Told by Dr. Preston. Charlotte Observer.

At the close of his sermon Sunday night Dr. Preston asked the congregation to unite in singing that old familiar hymn—"Just as I am." "Before you sing it," said he, "let me tell you the story of the hymn and perhaps there is some heart in this vast audience which may be touched thereby. The hymn was written by Miss Charlotte Elliott. In 1822 Dr. Caesar Malan, of Geneva, was visiting at Miss Elliott's father's. One evening he asked Miss Elliott if she thought herself to be an experimental Christian. Her health was failing and she often suffered pain. She resented his asking the question and told him that religion was a matter which she did not care to discuss. Dr. Malan replied that he would not say anything to displease her, but he would pray that she might give her heart to Christ and become a useful worker for Him. Several days after Miss Elliott came to the minister, apologized for her abrupt treatment and confessed that his question had troubled her. "But I do not know how to find Christ," she said. "I want you to help me." Come to Him just as you are," said Dr. Malan. That simple question and answer led to a life of spiritual activity on the part of Miss Elliott, and she wrote this beautiful hymn which I am going to ask you now to sing." The audience rose, and never before in the history of the First church has such a volume of sound gone up from the congregation. Every one sang. The song and incident, said a gentleman yesterday, were a sermon in themselves.

The Observer learned from Dr. Preston yesterday more of Miss Elliott's history, and that of her famous hymn. "Just as I am" was written in 1826. The words of Pastor Malan, in her own experience, were the writer's inspiration. It was first published anonymously, in "The Yearly Remembrances," an unpretending religious magazine. Some time after its publication a certain lady, struck by its beauty and spiritual force, had thousands of leaflets struck off, and scattered in the cities. "Twas at an English watering place that the name of the author was revealed, Miss Elliott was there for her health. One day her physician, an earnest Christian, placed one of the leaflets in her hand, saying he felt sure she would like it. The surprise and pleasure were mutual when she recognized her own hymn and he discovered that she had written it.

THE PAST GUARANTEES THE FUTURE. It is not what we say, but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does, that tells the story. Remember HOOD'S CURE.

GENERAL GORDON'S STORY.

"At Gettysburg, while the fight was the hottest," said General Gordon, "I noticed a handsome young Federal officer, whose bravery was conspicuous. After the battle had subsided I found this gallant soldier lying on the field. He was dying, and begged me to send a message to the Union lines. His wife had decided to share with him the fortunes of war and was at the officers' quarters in the Federal Army. 'I ordered my men to take the wounded officer to our camp and to make him as comfortable as possible. Then I sent some men with a flag of truce to the Union lines with the message from the dying officer to his wife. 'Late that night the party returned, and the meeting of the dying husband and his young wife was the most affecting scene which I have ever witnessed. 'I was compelled to go elsewhere, but before I left the sorrowful couple I ascertained that the name of the wounded officer was Major Barlow of New York. I often thought of the sad incident, which made upon me one of the most vivid impressions that I received in the war. 'Shortly afterward a cousin of mine, whose name and initials were the same as mine, was killed in battle. 'The war closed. Ten years afterward I was with a distinguished gentleman in New York, who invited me to be present at a dinner he was to give that evening. Among the guests to whom I was introduced was a certain Major Barlow. I supposed that he was a cousin of man whom I had left dying on the field at Gettysburg with his devoted wife beside him. 'I once knew a Major Barlow,' I said to my new acquaintance. 'I once knew a General Gordon,' he answered. 'But the Major Barlow I knew is dead,' I added. 'And the General Gordon whom I knew is also dead,' he answered. 'I started to tell him the story of the Major Barlow whom I had left dying on the field at Gettysburg, when he interrupted me, exclaiming: 'My God, General Gordon, I am that man! But you were killed at Antietam!' 'And I know you died at Gettysburg,' said I, 'for I saw you.' 'Mutual explanations followed. It seems strange to me that the warmest friendship of my life should have begun in those awful scenes of blood and carnage at Gettysburg. The simple service that I performed that day when I sent for that dying soldier's wife has made Major Barlow and his wife the dearest friends I have on earth, notwithstanding I wore the gray and he the blue.'—New York Advertiser.

A Des Moines woman who has been troubled with frequent colds, concluded to try an old remedy in a new way, and accordingly took a tablespoonful (four times the usual dose) of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy just before going to bed. The next morning she found that her cold had almost entirely disappeared. During the day she took a few doses of the remedy (one teaspoonful at a time) and at night again took a tablespoonful before going to bed, and on the following morning awoke free from all symptoms of the cold. Since then she has, on several occasions, used this remedy in like manner with the same good results, and is much elated over her discovery of so quick a way of curing a cold. For sale by N. A. PRIZES ON PATENTS.

How to get $100 and Perhaps Make a Fortune. We secure patents and to induce people to keep track of their bright ideas we offer a prize of one hundred dollars to be paid on the first of every month to the person who submits to us the most meritorious invention during the preceding month. We will also advertise the invention free of charge in the National Recorder, a weekly newspaper, published in Washington, D. C., which has an extensive circulation throughout the United States and is devoted to the interests of inventors.

NOT SO HARD AS IT SEEMS. The idea of being able to invent something strikes most people as being very difficult; this delusion the Company wishes to dispel. It is the simple things and small inventions that make the greatest amount of money, and the complex ones are seldom profitable. Almost everybody at some time or another, conceives an idea, which, if patented, would probably be worth to him a fortune. Unfortunately such ideas are usually dismissed without thought. The simple inventions like the car window which could be easily slid up and down without breaking the passenger's back, the saw pan, the collar button, the nut lock, the bottle stopper, the snow shovel, are things that almost everyone sees some way of improving upon, and it is these kind of inventions that bring the greatest returns to the author. The prize we offer will be paid at the end of each month, whether the application has been acted upon by the Patent Office or not. Every competitor must apply for a patent on his invention through us, and whether he secures the prize or not, the inventor will have a valuable patent. THE PRESS CLAIMS COMPANY, JOHN WENDENBERG, Gen'l Manager, 612 F. St. N. W., Washington, D. C. P. S. The responsibility of this company may be judged from the fact that its stock is held by about seventeen hundred of the leading newspapers of the United States.
