MORE TALK ABOUT FERTILIZERS.

"Farmer" Says the Buying Of the Article By the Ton Is a Great Disadvantage.

Walnut Cove Route 1, April 6.
Editor of the Danbury Reporter:
I wish to use your most valued paper to give my brother farmers my views on buying and using fertilizers.

My first view is for farmers to buy the materials and mix his fertilizer at home, but I can't get them to do that, so I will try to help them in buying the factory-mixed goods. The factory has to go to the phosphate, nitrogen and potash for his constituents. Therefore, when the farmer goes to purchase his fertilizers, they are the only ingredients that he is buying that will benefit him in his crops. The commercial value is about as follows this year in mixed goods, potash and phosphate is 5½ cents per pound and ammonia 16½ cents per pound. Now you can make the calculation at once and see if the dealer is overcharging you for your fertilizers.

One of the greatest frauds that has been put upon our farmers is the plan of selling fertilizer by the ton basis, that is a fraud, and one that the farmer has never caught up with, and one that no factory would think of buying his materials by the unit basis and should sell that way, then the farmer would know what he bought and what his materials had cost him. As he buys now, he does not, and a lot of good men can't, for he can't make the calculation. The brands are also confusing to a large per cent. of the farmers; that is also a fraud, and should be stopped by the law of every state in the union. The analysis is what to be governed by and the lower you buy the higher you pay for the fertilizing material. If the dealer would stop his way of selling and tell the farmer when he went to buy that he would sell him phosphate in a certain analysis at 5½ cents a pound and potash at the same, and ammonia at 16½ and then in a lower one for twice that amount, then the poor fellow could see what he was doing. I have given you the commercial value of fertilizer, but cannot give the agricultural value, for that depends largely on the crop it is used under, as some crops have a higher agricultural value than others. Every farmer must be his own judge of that.

If D-g-Killer has got his pants patched I would like to have him say something on this matter in the interest of the tobacco farmer.

The first load of fertilizer that I have seen moved this season the man told me what it cost him in potash and phosphate cost him 9½ cents per pound, and his ammonia cost him just 23½ cents per pound. That man today has no idea what his chemicals have cost him. That was the ton or bag basis that he bought under. If he had been buying those chemicals, he never would have paid that amount for them when he could get them for 5½ and 16½ cents per pound.
