

Some Times It Pays To Be A Tobacco Farmer.

Winston-Salem, Oct. 29.—The local leaf tobacco market is still firm, and statistics show that a total of 7,500,000 pounds has been sold here since the beginning of the present tobacco year, August 1.

Tobacco has brought an average of about $14.75 a hundred, which means that $1,105,250 has been paid out to the farmers of this section thus far this year.

The sales started this week with a clean deck, the market caught up with the big glut which lasted 11 days. During that time, a tremendous amount of tobacco changed hands and the average price did not fall below 15 cents a single day during the big break. Half a million dollars changed hands during the break just ended.

Last week's total sales aggregated 1,746,063. This is the largest number of pounds of tobacco sold in a single week this year, eclipsing the sales of the former week by 100,000 pounds. The market average for the week was $15.54.

High prices remained steady throughout the big sales, this being quite a surprise to every one because of the fact that such great quantities were rushed on the market at one time. The demand for light grades still remains strong and it is not thought that the prices for darker grades will drop any lower.

The first curings turned out this year proved to be the best colored tobacco seen on this market for years. Reports, however, from sections are not very encouraging as to the later curings. It is thought before long now the bright grades will all be sold and a slump in prices is then expected.

The crop in this section this year is divided into two kinds; the good and the bad; there is none fairly good, it is either very good or very bad.

It is the most prosperous time with the tobacco farmers in years and money is plentiful enough in the tobacco-producing areas near here.

Farmers are putting the wheat in the ground these days, and the indications point to a fairly good acreage. But everybody should try to raise enough bread to keep from buying, as flour is not apt to ever be cheap again, but will gradually get higher.
