BEAUTIFYING HOMES

Old Place Harder to Improve Than New Ones.

TREES AND SHRUBBERY

Are Very Important, Also the Proper Laying Out of the Walks, Etc.—Tear Away the Old Fences.

The improving of the grounds of old homes is a great deal more difficult than that of grounds where the home is new and there is nothing in the way of trees, shrubs, grass, etc., to begin with. In the majority of instances the planting on the old home grounds has been done without any attention whatever being paid to the proper location of trees, shrubs, etc., in regard to the beauty of the place. So it is clear that you are worse off in such a case than if you had nothing to start with.

Even grounds that have been planted at random this way can be very greatly improved by cutting out a few trees and shrubs in one place and planting a few more in another place. If the most of the old trees and shrubs must be cut down before the grounds can be properly beautified, it would be well to leave some of the old trees for shade and protection until some of the newly-set ones gets large enough for this purpose, even the the place might look better without them. On such grounds we very often find terraces, embankments, etc., and in the majority of instances it will be necessary to remove these before the place can be made natural and beautiful. And, usually, when improving old grounds, all of the walks and drives will have to be torn up and re-located. It is not necessary to go into any further discussion of the plantings on such grounds, as the rules governing the locating and planting of the trees, shrubs, etc., should be followed in the improving of the old grounds as far as it is possible.

One other point that is specially important is in regard to fences around the place. The most of the old homes have fences around them, and, if nothing else were done in the way of improving the grounds except the removing of these old fences, a great deal would be accomplished. A fence cannot add any beauty to a place, and in this respect they are similar to walks. However, they are sometimes useful, but they should never be used unless they are necessary. Sometimes it is necessary to fence the grounds to keep cattle off of them. This is true only in sections where the stock-law is not in effect. A showy or a fancy fence is always in bad taste, and beautiful places are often made to look "gaudy" and "flashy" just on account of the appearance of the fence. If a fence is necessary, let it be just as inconspicuous as possible.

Paint it a color that is not showy and at the same time will harmonize with the other parts of the grounds.

What has been said in this series of articles in regard to the improving of the home grounds may and should be applied in a general way to the improvement of our school grounds. Whatever we spend much of our money or time on should be made as beautiful a place as possible. The roadsides may be very greatly beautified by planting a few trees and shrubs along on either side of them.

Comfort and beauty may be added to the front porch by putting window-boxes on a level with the top of the banisters and growing such plants as salvias, coleus, geraniums, petunias, etc., in them. This applies especially to porches that are high from the ground, as the plants may be planted in the ground where the porch is not very high from the ground, and the same effect obtained as with the window-boxes on the high porches.—Prof. L. A. Niven, in Progressive Farmer.

Woman Finally Recovers From Nervous Breakdown

Impoverished nerves destroy many people before their time. Often before a sufferer realizes what the trouble is, he is on the verge of a complete nervous breakdown. It is of the utmost importance to keep your nervous system in good condition, as the nerves are the source of all bodily power. Mrs. Anna Kounz, 211 Mechanic St., Pueblo, Colo., says:

"For many years I suffered from nervous prostration; I was unable to do any house work and doctors failed to help me. Remedies I tried from druggists did not do me a particle of good. A neighbor told my husband about and he procured a bottle. After the first few doses I showed a marked improvement and after taking two bottles I was entirely cured. I have been perfectly well for years and cannot praise Dr. Miles' Nervine too highly.

If you are troubled with loss of appetite, poor digestion, weakness, inability to sleep, if you are in a general run-down condition, and unable to bear any part of the daily grind of life, you need something to strengthen your nerves. You may not realize what is the matter with you, but there is no reason why you should not be treated.

has proven its value in nervous disorders for thirty years, and merits a trial, no matter how many other remedies have failed to help you.

Sold by all druggists. If first bottle fails to benefit your money is returned. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.
