They have rented out their good farm to Mr. J. J. Stephens. Mrs. Covington and family are among our best people, and we are sorry for them to leave, but hope they will do well at Winston. The Reporter was talking to John, the son, the day before he left, and gathered from the conversation that the chief reason the family was leaving us was on account of the disadvantages of bad roads, poor school facilities, difficulties of the children attending school, difficulty of social intercourse, attending church, etc. Always the bad roads are taking from us our greatest asset.

Mr. P. H. Hall of Campbell was here Tuesday.

McCANLESS-CLARK.

Marriage In Winston-Salem Today At Nine O'clock A. M. -- Bridal Party Reaches Danbury at 2 P. M.

Dr. W. V. McCanless, of Danbury, and Miss Ada Clark, of Winston-Salem, were quietly married in Winston-Salem this morning at 9 o'clock by Rev. E. L. Bain, pastor of the Centenary M. E. church of that city. The wedding was rather a surprise, though not unexpected by the friends of the parties. Only a few relatives were present besides the principals. Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom left for Danbury on the 9:30 train via Rural Hall, arriving here today at 2 o'clock.

Dr. McCanless is one of the best known citizens of this county, where he stands high in his profession, in character, and family connections, and where his friends are legion. The bride is a daughter of Mr. Clark, a retired capitalist and business man of Winston-Salem. She is a lady of rare qualities of refinement and culture, and of exceptional accomplishments and most lovable disposition.

The Reporter is only one among the many friends of both parties who wish for them much happiness.

Thanksgiving.

Tomorrow is Thanksgiving. If ever the people of Stokes had cause to lift their hearts in gratitude, surely it is now, when tobacco, our chief staple, has been bringing the biggest prices in the history of the country, and when every person has felt the effect of the easy money. When you chew your turkey, think on these things.

Fire In the Mountain.

As usual, the mountain is on fire, set out by hunters, so it is said. The conflagration has already spread over several miles of timbered land, and is doing all the damage that it could possibly do considering the fact that so many former fires have devastated the same territory. Saturday, Sunday and Monday brisk winds fanned the flames, which travelled with considerable speed. The northern border of the fire is in the region of the Cutter place and Piedmont springs, while the other end reaches to the south side of the mountain.
