HELPFUL RULES.

Should there be rules in religion? We say, yes. A perfectly upright life is the result of careful planning and ceaseless watching, of deliberate, determined, systematic effort. This is the way all important things are compassed. Method and perseverance are of as great value in acquiring right habits as in acquiring material riches. The character that shows consummate serenity and ease of movement, or symmetrical development, has usually been built up by long, patient continuance in well doing. It is only by strict attention to rules for a good while that one reaches a place where rules can be dispensed with and what seems like spontaneous goodness be exhibited. Daniel's regularity in prayer had much to do with his reliability in an emergency. The spirit no doubt is more than the form, but in most cases it needs form even as the containing cask is necessary to the preservation of the precious liquid. We append, therefore in compact compass, a score or more of simple rules that have proved helpful in the conduct of the Christian life.

Make everything—even the smallest matters and the hardest—a means of spiritual improvement; they will either help or hinder our growth in grace; aim not so much to get rid of troubles as to get rich by them; they cannot be spared.

Extend, in your thought, the scope of God's will to the more minute matters of momentary occurrence, and insist on an increasingly exact conformity to that will in your life; this will furnish a magnificent and practically inexhaustible field for progress.

Steadfastly aim to have more humble thoughts of yourself, more kindly thoughts of your fellowman, and more trustful thoughts of God.

Pick out a few of the very finest, richest hymns and repeat them daily, sucking from them new sweetness and strength with each repetition; or use one for a whole week until it is wholly committed and absorbed, then select another for the following week.

Take some single great truth or text or couplet and see how perfectly you can embody it in your life for a single day.

With the hours as they strike, with the trains as they go, with the horses as they pass, connect some holy thought, some pious ejaculations that shall the closer join you to God; let everything see lead you to the Lord.

Prove the preciousness of Jesus and test your attachment to him, when you cannot do extraordinary for him, by doing the common things (more especially one thing each day) with an uncommon amount of love thrown into it and a very particular purpose to please him perfectly in it.

Take time to be holy, for holiness cannot come otherwise, nor can time be better spent than in this direction; but one exceedingly profitable way to take it is by using in meditation and aspiration those scraps and shreds of time which are so frequently lost or wasted but may be turned to excellent account by letting the soul stream up to God in prayer or praise.

Be silent concerning the wrongs and slights and contempts you meet with; breeding over them or seeking comfort from others is weakness and pretty apt to do harm.

When temptations come do not stop to attack them directly but simply look away to Jesus and pass on to your work; replace the evil thoughts with good ones; the less attention the dogs get the quicker they will stop barking.

Aim to be a symmetrical Christian; it is true you cannot equally excel in all directions, but you can correct your main deficiencies, and this is a large part of life's task.

Arrange to get a full spiritual meal from suitable devotional exercises every day, if possible; if it cannot be compassed, make sure at least that Sunday furnishes it, lest the soul utterly starve.

Take all things from God and do all things for him; it is the way to lead a truly sacred life. Pause a second before taking any action to be sure you are in just the right spirit, in close touch with the Master and seeking primarily His glory.

Form the habit of using pen or pencil in your devotional reading to concentrate thought, to formulate purpose, to preserve materials for subsequent review.

Cultivate a devout practice of speech, avoiding those careless, current expressions which shut out the active agency of God in affairs, whether it be the weather, or the changes usually attributed to "luck," "chance" or "fortune," good or bad, it is a pity to lose the opportunity for the practically witnessing and glorifying of God with our lips.—King's Messenger.

The Best For Christ.

Christ wants the best. He in the far off ages
Once claimed the firstling of the flock, the finest of the wheat,
And still He asks His own with gentle pleading
To lay their brightest hopes and greatest talents at His feet.
He'll not forget the feeblest service, humblest love.
He only asks that of our store, we give to Him
The best we have.
Christ gives the best. He takes the heart we offer
And fills them with His glorious beauty, joy and peace.
And in His service, as we're growing stronger,
The calls to grand achievements still increase.
The richest gifts for us on earth, or in the heavens above
Are hid in Christ. In Jesus we receive
The best we have.
And is our best too? O friends, let us remember
That once our Lord poured out His soul for us,
And in the prime of His mysterious manhood,
Gave up His precious life upon the cross!
The Lord of lords by whom the worlds were made
Through bitter grief and tears gave us
The best He had.

Mr. Overby Writes.

Reliance, Va., April 7.
To the Danbury Reporter and Its Readers:

I am a Stokes county boy and I am traveling through the valley of Virginia where several of our old Stokes county men traveled during the civil war, and I am close to Cedar creek where a great battle was fought, and where one of our good old soldiers got wounded. I am also near the Winchester battle ground where several other good men got wounded, and it is good to look over these old battle fields and think of the good old brave Stokes county fellows who fought so hard, and now the most of them have passed away.

Rheumatism
Just put a few drops of Sloan's on the painful spot and the pain stops. It is really wonderful how quickly Sloan's acts. No need to rub it in—laid on lightly it penetrates to the bone and brings relief at once. Kills rheumatic pain instantly.

Mr. James E. Alexander, of North Hempstead, Me., writes: "Many strains in my back and hips brought on rheumatism in the sciatic nerve. I had it so bad one night when sitting in my chair, that I had to jump on my feet to get relief. I at once applied your Liniment to the affected part and in less than ten minutes it was perfectly easy. I think it is the best of all Liniments I have ever used."
