AUTO ACCIDENT AT WALNUT COVE

Mrs. Leff Mabe, of Meadows, was seriously injured and her husband suffered cuts and bruises last night about 7:00 o'clock when Mr. Mabe's car crashed with another car driven by H. C. Hale, of Huntington, W. Va., at the point where the Walnut Cove and Madison hard-surface roads intersect.

Mrs. Mabe was taken to a Winston-Salem hospital where early reports were that she had suffered a fractured hip with cuts on the head and had lost two fingers. It was thought, however, that she would recover. Mr. Mabe's injuries were not serious.

The West Virginia car, a large Lincoln, was occupied by Leon Shackelford and H. C. Hale, the latter driving. Neither of the men were injured.

Mr. Mabe and his wife were in a Chevrolet touring car and it was completely demolished.

At the time of the wreck the Lincoln car was coming from toward Madison and had just come onto the Danbury-Walnut Cove road. The Chevrolet was on the same road but on the left of the road with the intention of coming toward Danbury instead of Madison. Being unfamiliar with the road and seeing the light from the other car the driver of the Lincoln kept bearing to the right, resulting in a collision.

Messrs. Hale and Shackelford gave bond and proceeded on to Winston-Salem last night. It is learned that a hearing will be had today.

EXPERT ADVICE ON TREATING WOUNDS

Use Water That Has Been Boiled and Pure Soap To Cleanse All Wounds—Prevents Blood Poisoning.

The average person who receives a wound and doesn't have the advice of a physician does not know whether to wash the wound or not. Following are some instructions given by the physicians of one of the largest insurance companies in the world that might be helpful to some of us:

No wound is so slight that it may not become infected and cause death.

If a wound which breaks the skin is not promptly and correctly treated, there may be immediate infection from germs that are found anywhere and everywhere — streptococcus, staphylococcus and saprophytes.

It should be assumed that all accidental wounds may be infected.

During the World War medical science discovered that by using pure soap and boiled water, fresh wounds, big and little, could be thoroughly cleansed, thereby reducing to a minimum the danger of infection. In other words, the germs were literally washed out of wounds.

Small wounds, immediately cleansed and properly covered with sterilized gauze will, as a rule, heal very promptly without further treatment. But if germs are covered over and bound into wounds, or are sealed in by drawing the skin together, infection is almost certain and serious complications may result.

In applying the soap water to a new wound, it is best to use a pad of sterilized gauze. Any pure soap will do—liquid, soft or hard—but a liquid soap as free from alkali as may be obtained is best. Otherwise the wound may sting or smart. But the slight temporary discomfort caused by a liberal application of soap and water is of little consequence when compared with the protection afforded by a thorough cleansing.

Common sense must determine how long a fresh wound should be washed. But remember always, the washing must be thorough so that the soap bubbles may do their part and lift the germs away from the flesh. The water carries the germs away. The wound must be clean before healing begins.

Warm water that has been sterilized by boiling is safest and the utmost care should be taken to keep the fingers from coming in contact with the surface of the wound.

Wash big or little wounds with soap and water at once—as First Aid before the doctor comes.
