Abusing Highways

Danbury, N. C., Jan. 13.—If I believed that the drunken fool who abuses the tax-bought freedom and privileges of a clean citizen deserves as much privilege from his nation as he who, with temperance, helps to make his country decent and safe, I would not be a prohibitionist. The man who robs me or my wife and children of safety and ease of feeling, say, on the highways, is as much of a criminal and robber as he who steals from my house.

The Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act are as possible of enforcement as laws against murder and robbery, when Americans support temperance with enough vigorous spirit.
