THINGS THAT NEVER HAPPEN

Little Theatre For Paris In Celebrated Latin Quarter

THE Little Theatre movement has spread to Paris. This distinctively American innovation has been introduced to Paris by Helena Rubinstein, who believes that the theatre is one of the world's basic channels of education and recreation. The New American Theatre, which will seat 350 people will encourage the beginning dramatist and those who, for one reason or another, have not yet made a commercial success. New and unusual plays will be produced with but little reference to their commercial value. If the play contains a real idea, if it provokes thought, then it will have a chance at the New American Theatre. Madame Rubinstein has already chosen a site for her new project, in the heart of the celebrated Latin Quarter in Paris. She sailed recently to hasten arrangements for the erection of the theatre itself.
