

IF YOU NEED FARM LABOR

THEN REGISTER YOUR WANTS WITH STOKES COUNTY RE-EMPLOYMENT OFFICE -- FAMILIES WHO MAY GET HELP.

Mrs. Dolly E. Dodson, manager of Stokes County Re-employment office, announces that her office is now ready to register landlords and farmers who are in need of farm labor of any kind. Likewise, families desiring to rent a farm and unemployed farm labor are urged to register.

Families who left farms for work in towns or factories and are now interested in going back to the farm are urged, Mrs. Dodson said, to register and give the government a chance to help them find the kind of employment they prefer.

There may be some families applying for farm placement who do not have enough food and clothing to "run" them until the crop is made. Under certain conditions, provision will be made to extend help to such families, she said.

The re-employment office is located at Walnut Cove; applicants may see T. D. Martin at Danbury, also who is with the re-employment office. All who are in need of this service are urged to take advantage of it.

Gasoline Drops One and a Half Cents on Gallon

Tax-harrassed motorists have something to encourage them as they start the second week of the new year. The retail price of gasoline has been reduced 1.2 cents in price by refining companies, which coupled with a reduction of a half cent on the gallon in federal tax, means a drop of 1.7 cents on standard test gasolines.

Standard Oil Company was first to announce the reduced retail rates and by noon Monday most of the oil concerns had communicated directly with their headquarters and had received permission to fall in line with the new rates.

The standard high test gasoline which heretofore has retailed for 24.7 cents a gallon will now be sold at 23.5 cents a gallon. The standard test which for some time past has been sold for 22.7 cents a gallon will now be retailed at 21.5 cents a gallon. The grade heretofore retailed at 21 cents straight will retail for 20 cents.

G. T. White of Yadkin county built and filled a 65-ton trench silo this fall at a cost of only 37 cents per ton of silage stored, he reports.

Hints for Homemakers
By Jane Rogers

To keep garage floor clean and prevent the tracking of dirt and grime into the house place a piece of structural insulation four feet by ten feet on the garage floor under the car to catch the drippings of oil and grease. It can be obtained from almost any lumber dealer.

A little soap rubbed on the bottom edges of a sticking drawer will often cause it to slide easily.

Makes Good Record With Quality Tobacco

High yields of good quality tobacco—the result of careful and intensive cultivation—have brought G. E. Callihan, of Bladen County, an average of $316.98 an acre for his leaf during the past eight years.

The average included low figures resulting from depression prices and from hail storms damaging the crop one year. In 1926 with tobacco bringing top prices, his yield of 1680 pounds to the acre sold for $528.33. His lowest return was in 1931 when low prices and an unfavorable season held the receipts down to $157 an acre.

In 1933 a per acre yield of 1,241 pounds sold for $217.70. Most of the crop was sold before the holidays on the border markets. The government equalization payments will bring the total per acre receipts to $216.24.

Although Callihan farms dark-colored soil that has to be drained he keeps it in a high state of fertility by rotating crops and by applying small quantities of manure and 8-3-5 fertilizer mixed according to the State College formula. His rotation consists of cotton followed by rye the first year and tobacco followed by cowpeas the second. The rye and cowpeas are turned under.

Callihan sows large plant beds so that he will have an abundance of strong, healthy plants. He uses the Cash variety. To keep the leaf from growing too coarse and heavy, he crowds the plants 18 inches apart in four rows. He allows the stalks to attain six feet in height before topping them, thus preventing any leaf from absorbing too much nourishment. The result is a high yield of excellent quality.

Callihan attributes his success fundamentally to the fact that he does not make tobacco his one and only crop. His farm has only 32 acres under cultivation, and a large part of that is devoted to other crops. Usually he plants 2 acres himself and allows a tenant to plant 3 acres. He has found that it pays better to cultivate properly a few acres than to see how much he can grow on larger tracts.

Xmas Candles

THE word "candies" is spelled in that peculiar way in the headline just to remind you of those good hard Christmas candies that come in cans. They can be used to decorate small trees and to fill miniature Christmas stockings and favors, but the best thing to do with them is to eat them up. Then there is the greater assortment of candies of all kinds that come in tin boxes, but perhaps, after all, it's most fun to make your Christmas candy yourself. For instance, now that rum will probably be legal by Christmas, why not make some of these

Cocunut Rum Balls: Cream four tablespoons butter and slowly add one and one-half cups confectioner's sugar and one cup light brown sugar, creaming well. Add two tablespoons evaporated milk and one tablespoon rum. Knead well with hands and chill for some time in ice box. Make into balls and roll in canned dry cocunut which has been toasted in the oven until a golden brown.

Or This Fruit Candy

Green Gage Fudge: Remove stones from the green gage plums from an 8-ounce can, press through a sieve, add to the plum syrup with three tablespoons sugar and cook until very thick. Cook two cups sugar, one cup of thin cream or evaporated milk, two tablespoons corn syrup and two tablespoons butter to 230 degrees, add the plum jam and continue cooking to the soft ball stage, 254 degrees. Cool, beat until creamy, add one-third cup pecans, and pour into a buttered pan, cool and mark into squares.

In Caldwell county last year 240 club boys completed projects in 4-H club work and made reports to the farm agent.

At a meeting of early Irish potato growers at Washington, Beaufort county, last week an agreement was signed to reduce and, as far as possible, to prevent an increase in acreage to the crop this season.

There were 184,442 farm women and girls, both white and colored, who were taught the principles of food conservation during the past year by home garden growing and how to feed their families for better health agents of the State College Extension Service.

DRESSING UP THE SPINACH

By BARBARA B. BROOKS

We all know that spinach is among the most healthful of foods and that it should appear frequently on every wisely planned menu. The fact remains, however, that in almost every family there are those who do not like it and can be persuaded to eat it only with difficulty, if at all.

Here is a suggestion for a spinach dish that is really delicious. It has been known to turn the most hardened scoffers at this wholesome vegetable into lasting spinach enthusiasts.

Buttered Corn Flake Spinach
1 pound spinach 3 tablespoons butter
1/2 teaspoon salt 1 cup corn flakes

Cook the spinach in a small amount of boiling water. Drain. Add salt. Cut or chop fine. Melt butter in a skillet and add corn flakes. Stir until each flake is well buttered. Place spinach in a casserole dish, spread buttered corn flakes over the top, and serve.

Sweets Consumption a Measure Of Civilization, Says Economist

WHAT is the mark of a high stage of civilization? Plenty of sweet foods is, somewhat surprisingly, the answer suggested by Dr. John Lee Coulter, noted economist, member of the United States Tariff Commission, and now in charge of the efforts being made by the various sugar industries to draw up a stabilization code to deal with the ills of their industries and increase employment.

Dr. Coulter's answer, of course, calls for elaboration. He does not mean that an individual or a people merely by eating more sugar will necessarily become more civilized. If that were the case it would probably be a relatively simple matter to bring the more backward peoples up to the standards of the more advanced. It would only be necessary to ship a lot of sugar to the Papuan headhunters, and in a few years they would provide a thriving market for motor cars, radios, and plus fours.

What Dr. Coulter does mean is that the ability to purchase sweet foods in all their many forms is a symbol of that degree of comfort, happiness and security which means a high stage of civilization to the vast majority of people in this country—a country which has always prided itself so much upon its high standards. "It is the ability of the great mass of the American people to possess and enjoy the little luxuries of existence which has always distinguished us from the rest of the world," Dr. Coulter declares, "and that is what our present recovery program is trying to restore."

"For a comparative few of us," he says, "happiness depends on a trip to Europe upon a luxurious liner, Parisian hats and perfumes, or membership in an exclusive country club. For the tens of millions who make up the backbone of our citizenry, however, happiness depends upon far simpler pleasures and I know of no better symbol of them all than the ability to finish off the meal with ice cream and cake with frosting on it, to stop in at the drug store for a sundae on a hot afternoon, or to bring home a box of candy to the family at the end of the week. These are the luxuries that practically all of our people used to be able to afford, and that, if our plans succeed, they will be able to afford again."

Dr. John Lee Coulter, noted economist and tariff expert, now presiding over efforts of the sugar industries to draw up their code.

"America was largely settled by people who, leaving poverty behind them in Europe, sought to better their lot in the new world. At first times were necessarily hard. Food was none too plentiful. As conditions improved a greater abundance and variety of food on the family table was one of the first marks of improvement. From the earliest settlements until the present day, our people have always celebrated their joyful anniversaries by pling the groaning board with sweets and other special delicacies. When we see the ability to do this restored to all our people we will know that our 'New Deal' has succeeded."

The sugar stabilization program in which Dr. Coulter is now engaged is an endeavor to bring producers and processors of sugar into an agreement along lines that will lead to greater employment in the cane sugar refineries along the Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific Coasts, in the cane fields of Louisiana and Florida, and in the beet sugar fields and processing plants in the Middle and Far West. It is an ambitious and far-reaching program, and one that will have a far-reaching effect upon the welfare and purchasing power of tens of thousands of workers.

Better Breakfasts

THE lady in the one-piece leopard skin suit, which you see in the picture is not out to lure a mate, nor is she out to do a little sun-worshipping. She is merely meditating. She is saying "Dear me—what SHALL I serve for breakfast?" Then her eye falls on something in the distance. It's the berries. If her hero man brings home the bacon, her problem is solved. Suppose you serve a berry breakfast, with grilled Canadian bacon. Instead of going out berry-picking, just call your grocer and ask for the canned berries that are juicy and have that outdoor flavor. Here is the menu:

Sunrise Cocktail
Ready-to-Eat Cereal with Raspberries and Cream
Grilled Canadian Bacon
Buttermilk Biscuits Coffee
Sunrise Cocktail: Drain the syrup from an 8-ounce can of raspberries without crushing the berries, and combine the syrup with the contents of a No. 2 can of grapefruit juice. Chill thoroughly and serve. This serves six persons. The berries are to be served with the cereal and cream.*
