

AT COURT

W. R. Stovall, of Lawsonville, who is an educated man, not so much in books but in the knowledge of people and human nature and common horse sense. He is a philosopher. One of his sayings is "It ain't every woman that wear a dress who is a lady, or every fellow who wears britches is a man." That is the truth, and you know it. It's a mighty waxy mule that can fool Will Stovall as to his age or quality, or a mighty diplomatic cow that can deceive him.

N. S. Mullean, of Wilson's Store, that fine old community of Meadows township. Mr. Mullean keeps himself well posted on public affairs, with an eye single to political trends.

J. B. Bales, of Buck Island, a very capable farmer, who knows the art of producing fine tobacco, the kind that shimmers like gold.

Fred Bennett, a local writer who delights to worry the boys who cuss Stokes and move out, then move back again.

W. A. Southern, of Meadows, who has just recovered from a siege with pneumonia.

James W. Young, of Walnut Cove, who is one of Stokes county's most respected citizens.

A. J. Fagg, ex-Clerk Superior Court of Stokes, now a citizen of Winston-Salem.

Moir Hawkins, of Sandy Ridge, candidate for Democratic sheriff.

Hard Ziglar, of Sandy Ridge, Miss Laura Ellington, of Sandy Ridge. Miss Ellington's time is often pressed into service by public duties.

J. C. Carson, superintendent of schools of Stokes.

Luther McKenzie, Germanton, who carries his years sprightly as in other days.

Will Stovall, of Sandy Ridge, a fine judge of a mule.

Dr. J. L. Hanes, of Pine Hall, back recently from a northern hospital, improved in health, and busy as ever. Slow up, Doc, remember to avoid the pace that kills.

Joe Bill Neal, of Walnut Cove, whose initials are J. W., same as his father's Dr. J. Walter's, same as his uncle's Dr. J. William's, same as his brother's Dr. Joseph Walter's. This is a quadruple coincidence. Reminds one of a prominent Shelby law firm of a few years ago, where partners were O. Max Gardner and Odus M. Mall. One of them Governor of a great State, the other chairman of the State Democratic executive committee.

Tom Hart, who lives in Sandy of Walnut Cove, but who didn't visit the town for more than 10 years. Tom shared a lot during those absent years, for many a good time being missed there in those days passed away under Tom's version. But we are all curious one way or another. Some of us stay away from our friends too long, and others visit them too often.

Miss Edmond, popular P. E. D. candidate of Lawsonville, who is the very spit of Rudy Valler; also Frank Tiley from the same town, a candidate for the board of education; Bob Lawson, who wouldn't tell you a lie to save your life.

Mrs. Willie Hairston Saunders, of Walnut Cove, who is one of the finest business women and one of the most charming ladies of the county.

Harry Davis, of Walnut Cove. H. O. Hall, of Peter's Creek township.

Will Fulp, of Walnut Cove, popular agent of Security Life & Trust Co., of Winston-Salem.

Erwin Shelton, of Moore's Springs.

Dr. Braswell, physician of Sandy Ridge.

Chas. R. Hebeke, attorney, and O. M. Kiser, of King.

Henry Wight, of Westfield.

Fred Bennett, of Peter's Creek township.

J. Ellis Coon, of Pinnacle, cashier of the Bank of Pinnacle.

W. G. Moore, of Lawsonville, who weighs 295 pounds, and is not too fat.

E. P. Newsum, who has been the Reporter's reliable and efficient agent at King since the Spanish-American war, of which he's a veteran.

Carl White, of Germanton. J. O. Boyles, of Capella.
