A Chicken Stew Turned Into A Squirrel Stew

Mr. Lon Sisk is authority for the details of a very remarkable feast which was held recently. It was originally intended for a chicken stew, and a big pot had been arranged in which chickens, vegetables, etc., were stewing. As the affair was being held under a grove of large trees, which were infested with squirrels, it was soon noticed that the little animals while playing among the limbs above, frequently lost their footing and fell, and no less than 32 of them landed in the pot and were stewed. So that the participants were so well pleased that they called it a "squirrel stew" instead of a chicken stew.

Mr. Sisk declares the barbecue was the best-tasting he ever helped eat.
