A Defense of the Ku Klux Klan.

Who are the detractors of Hugo L. Black, named to the Supreme Court bench by President Roosevelt, and ratified by the United States Senate?

They are practically the same crowd who are the political enemies of President Roosevelt, implacable foes of the New Deal, unscrupulous stranglers of the AAA and its heaven-sent relief for the farmers, heartless opponents of a fair living for labor, and shameless oppressors of women and children who toil long hours. They are led on and actuated by malefactors of great wealth snug in their special privilege, and whose incessant barkings are echoed by political pirates and chinquapin politicians.

This editorial would be a defense of the great hooded order which is a victim of the froth of confused and irresponsible writers because of the misunderstanding and ignorance and prejudice of the general public. These writers prey on the ignorance and fears of the uninformed, who accept undisputed misstatement for facts, which is allowed to go unchallenged.

One of the spurious writers says: "He (Black) took a solemn oath to persecute the Jew, the Catholic and the Negro."

Hundreds of North Carolinians, many Forsyth and Stokes county citizens, belonged to the Ku Klux Klan. Among these were men of the best type of Southern citizenship, law-abiding, patriotic and sincere in their obligations to the government and society. Not one of them took the oath which is imputed to Justice Black. Justice Black subscribed to no such oath. The Ku Klux Klan never imposed or submitted any such oath.

Many Klansmen were real friends of the negro and the Jew. There was no antagonism to the Catholic per se, except perhaps by irresponsible members.

What did the Ku Klux Klan stand for, what was the creed of the outlawed society?

Here it is: It stood for the reign of law, and the JUSTICE of the law.

It stood for the sanctity of the American home, the virtue and the inviolability of woman, and the protection of womanhood against those who would violate these sacred rights.

It stood for the defense of our English Bible, and the promotion and the perpetuation of the Christian religion.

Its creed demanded the purity of the Anglo-Saxon blood, the strict segregation of the races, and against any amalgamation of repellent types of citizenship.

It respected the sacredness of the Bill of Rights, and believed in the ultimate and everlasting triumph of the American constitution.

Its ideals were those of true Southern Christian manhood and womanhood, of honor, justice, temperance, chivalry.

Of such was the Ku Klux Klan.

Was it a crime to subscribe to such a creed?

The Public Health Nurse

Since the public health nurse does not engage in the practice of curative medicine many people do not understand how a nurse could otherwise profitably occupy her time and use her training. Protecting and promoting public health involves a wide variety of activities by the public health nurse. Among the varied duties are:

Communicable disease control, including tuberculosis and venereal diseases and vaccination against typhoid, diphtheria, and smallpox.

Maternity, infant, pre-school and school hygiene, pre-natal and post partum instruction and care is particularly important for mothers whose delivery care is entrusted to midwives. Midwives are instructed and supervised. Finding the defects of the growing child and co-operating with other community agencies in securing corrections.

Just as the police and fire departments protect against property loss the health department protects against health loss in the community and in a positive sense serves to promote a happier and more abundant life among the citizenship.

The careful collection, analysis, and interpretation of statistics of cases of illness, births and deaths is an important health department function.

Emphasis is on the prevention and health instruction rather than curative medical practice.

With the public health nurse working toward the prevention of sickness, disability and loss of time from work, more people in the community are able to call their private physician early and pay him for needed services. Even the local private physicians, therefore, are benefited by a good public health program because they share in prevention work, are better appreciated, and are better paid for their curative practice.

New Miracles Of The Photoelectric Cell
By James D. Purdy
Director, Schools of Electrical Engineering, International Correspondence Schools

TRANSFERENCE of light impulses into electrical impulses through the medium of a photoelectric cell is the basis of a newly invented method for the transmission of color photographs over long distance telephone circuits. In a recent demonstration of the method a three-color photograph was transmitted by telephone from Chicago to New York.

The United States Bureau of Standards has developed a balloon device to determine the safe flying ceiling during foggy weather. As the balloon ascends a photoelectric cell measures the light at different levels. Varying brightness of the light causes a change in the pitch of a radio signal which the device transmits to the recorder on the ground.

A new photoelectric device is now available for measuring light reflected from a wall or other flat surface. A hollow metal sphere is brought into position with its opening against the surface to be tested. Light is directed into the sphere through a tubular arm. An electric eye accurately measures the amount of light reflected from the surface.
