Bob Reynolds Letter.

One of the most important proposals pending in Congress is that relating to reorganization of agencies of the Federal government. Such a step has been recommended from time to time by a long list of presidents. It is the result of a mushroom growth of bureaus and commissions which has, in turn, meant duplicate functions and sometimes confusion.

When it is considered that there are 132 separate agencies existing in our government, it is readily apparent why there is a need for consolidation, coordination and reorganization. In fact, the need is generally recognized. The principal differences of opinion are with regard to the method, particularly as to the part Congress will have in approving such shifts as may be made.

A vital factor in the proposed reorganization, and one which is the subject of much discussion, is the fact that some agencies more or less under the direct control of Congress are involved. Some question whether Congress should surrender its control over these agencies. Others contend that due to conflicting views among the 531 members of the Senate and House reorganization by Congress might never be achieved. This is used as an argument for giving the President broad powers to reshape the units of government.

While much attention has been given to the pending reorganization bill due to enlarged facilities for keeping the public informed, subject is an old one. As far back as March, 1917, the Congress passed a law which provided that:

"The Bureau of Efficiency shall investigate duplication of service in the various executive departments and establishments of the government, including bureaus and divisions, and make a report to the President thereon, and the President is hereby authorized, after such reports shall have been made to him, whenever he finds such duplications to exist, to abolish same."

As some members of Congress contend, each agency of government considers its functions most vital. Thus every pressure possible is brought into play to preserve and enlarge these functions. Yet, in final analysis, it is clearly up to the Congress, the President and the people, to say which functions of the government are essential. The people express their views in the selection of men for office who represent their views.

If Federal expenditures are not absolutely essential. If the efficiency of government operations are to be increased, certainly the first step is to eliminate duplication and confusion.

In private business, general direction finally centers at one source, regardless of the functions and departments of the business. Thus it would seem desirable, in government, to reduce the number of agencies by re-grouping or consolidating those having similar functions under a single head, and abolishing such agencies or such functions, or any part thereof, as may be necessary for the efficient conduct of the government.

It might be cited that individual Senators and members of the House, by reason of varying interests of their constituents, because of work on committees and for other reasons have a particular interest in certain Federal agencies. As a result, they sometimes seek to safeguard the activities of these agencies. This means difficulty in achieving reorganization by Congress.

But whatever the merits or demerits of particular phases of proposed Federal reorganization, the fact that the subject is being aired and given serious consideration, bespeaks future progress in adjusting government activities to the needs of our people.

King Enters Co-Operative Essay Contest

One Stokes county school—King—is among the more than 150 rural high schools of the State that have already entered the 11th annual Co-operative Essay Contest and others are expected to participate.

All rural schools in Stokes county have been sent material and invited to enter the essay contest, according to M. G. Mann, general manager of the N. C. Cotton Growers Cooperative Association and the Farmers Co-operative Exchange, the two farmer-owned cooperatives that are sponsoring the contest. "We hope that every school in the county will participate in the essay contest," Mr. Mann said, pointing out that there is still time to enter.

The subject of the essay contest this year will be "The Kind of Farmer I Intend to Be" for boys and "The Kind of Farm Woman I Intend to Be" for girls. In addition to the usual prize of a one-year college tuition scholarship the winner will also be presented with a $100 cash award to help pay other expenses during the first year in college.

It Is Dangerous

It is dangerous to sell a SUBSTITUTE for 666 just to make three or four cents more. Customers are your best assets; lose them and you lose your business. 666 is worth three or four times as much as a SUBSTITUTE.

SOUTHERN PINE GOES TO NEW YORK FAIR

NEW YORK (Special). — Southern yellow pine from the Eastern Shore, Maryland, and from points in Delaware, Virginia and North Carolina is already going into foundations in the central area of the New York World's Fair of 1939. Governor Whelan, President of the Fair Corporation, has just announced the purchase of 466 sticks of pine piling, in lengths up to 80 feet, from Nicholas Brothers, of 90 West Street, Manhattan, and Norfolk, Virginia. Shipments of this lot are originating at Frankfort, Delaware, Preston, Maryland, and Mills and Charlton, Virginia. An order for piling of similar size is being filled at points in North Carolina. The pine sticks are being driven into the sub-meadow fill of the 124 1/2-acre exhibition site where they will serve as part of the foundations for bridge abutments near the Theme Centre and amusement areas of the Fair.
