Mrs. J. J. Taylor Entertains F. A. Club

(Contributed.)

One of the most interesting meetings of the Fine Arts Club was held Wednesday evening in the home of the club treasurer, Mrs. J. J. Taylor, with Mrs. R. R. King, associate hostess.

The Taylor home was prettily decorated with fall flowers for the occasion.

With the president, Mrs. R. L. Smith, presiding, a short business session was held.

Reports were heard from the demonstration party held with Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Wall and the "teachers' feed" at the school lunch room where neat sums were realized from both. Also plans were made to attend the district meeting at Rural Hall Friday.

A most interesting program was given with Miss Luna Taylor as leader.

A book review was given by Mrs. N. E. Pepper, and Mrs. Dallas Kirby read a paper on "Story of the American Flag."

The club was very happy to have R. T. Chanler of New York city and South Boston, Va., who is the guest of his niece, Mrs. Tom Preston, of Pine Hall, and Mrs. Max Genet, also of Pine Hall, as guests for the evening.

Mr. Chanler charmed the members with his recital on a miniature organ.

The club joining with him in a "sing" and a clever musicale contest with Mrs. A. J. Ellington winner.

During the social hour an instructive contest, "The Correct Uses of Our Flag", was given with Mrs. Tom Preston, winner of a beautiful lapel pin of the Stars and Stripes.

After which a delicious salad course, followed with sweets and nuts was served by the hostesses and Nellie Louise and Angela Taylor.

Those attending the district meeting of federated clubs which was to be held at Rural Hall Sept. 27 are as follows:

Mrs. R. L. Smith, president of the local club; and Mesdames J. J. Taylor, J. S. Taylor, A. G. Sisk, N. E. Wall, Dallas C. Kirby, R. E. Moorefield, J. F. Martin, A. J. Ellington.

The First Frosts

People generally had fires in their stoves, furnaces or fireplaces. Even two weeks ago it frosted in several places in the county.

HAS WILLKIE ANNEXED WINSTON ? —BOB BOBS AGAIN.

(An Editorial.)

The heavy Winston-Salem Wendell Willkie sentiment, which will result in a majority of 2 to 1 against Roosevelt in November—if we may believe Mr. Marshall Kurfees—enjoys a steady and forward-pushing champion in Mr. R. M. Hanes, President of the American Bankers Association and Wachovia Bank and Trust Company.

While Mr. Hanes campaigns in the distant financial precincts, his co-millionaires, synthetic millionaires, satellites, sycophants and sybarites keep the Willkie boom rolling round and round in North Carolina's second city.

Now, listen: This is Atlantic City, and the speaker is Mr. Robt. M. Hanes, President of the American Bankers Association and the Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. Hear him:

"This emergency of defense may well have within it the stern realities which will help the American people to APPRAISE SOBERLY some of the POLICIES WHICH WE HAVE BEEN BLINDLY FOLLOWING."

Overlooking the inference that we have all been drunk as well as blind, it may be interesting to observe, after reflection, that the President of the American Bankers Association and the Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., in his numerous public addresses, treats considerably less of the intricacies of finance and economics than of governmental policies at Washington.

As Mr. Hanes is conceded to be very unfriendly to the New Deal, this latest ebullition may easily be considered as a sequel to his Hayden Lake speech in which the Associated Press reported him as saying:

"Every citizen should guard carefully his personal liberty in this time of stress. Once your personal liberties are taken away they will never be returned. There is too much talk of war. The United States needs to work solidly and calmly. Let us not confuse defense of our nation with a hysteria which will sweep us needlessly into SOMEONE ELSE'S WAR."

(After Mr. Hanes' Hayden Lake statement had been criticised, he charged the Associated Press with misquoting him.)

Assuming that the Associated Press may be correct in its latest quotation in re the President of the American Bankers Association and the Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., we are constrained to concede to the two-fold President a measure of fine tact and conservatism in that he chose to be so unspecific in his subtle allegations against the New Deal. It is noticed he only damned it in a general way, omitting a bill of particulars. It was evidently safer to employ innuendo. So he averred only this: "We have been blindly following IT along."

One naturally wonders at the dual-executive's meaning. He was cautious. He was tactful. He chose insinuation rather than specific or direct charge. One wonders what he meant, and everyone is confident he did not refer to the New Deal's activities in the early part of '33 when the posting winds echoed that dismal plaint of a thousand financial institutions: "Save us or we perish." And the salvation came free.

Neither, we opine, was it that smooth ruse that rescued a vast multitude of farmers with their mortgages, or the laborers without a job, or the small business man fighting with his back to the wall. The naked and the hungry, the barefoot throng that crowded the highways and the byways without hope or sustenance—the great insurance companies on the verge of bankruptcy and the railways in the hands of receivers.

None of these blessings was meant to be censured in the alleged "blind following" by the innocent but befuddled country.

TOBACCO PRICES HIGHER THAN '39

Maybe after all it is only a blanket endorsement—like Willkie's—of every policy of the New Deal except the New Deal?
