MEET IN RALEIGH NEXT WEEK

CONFERENCE OF WELFARE OFFICIALS TO BE ADDRESSED BY HOEY AND BROUGHTON — STOKES COUNTY FUNCTIONARIES WILL ATTEND.

Governor Clyde R. Hoey and Democratic gubernatorial nominee, J. Melville Broughton, will headline the one-day joint conference of county welfare board members, county superintendents of public welfare, and members of the State Board of Charities and Public Welfare, when officials from all North Carolina counties are expected to be in Raleigh during the fair week meeting, October 9. The governor and the prospective governor will speak at the luncheon meeting to be held at the Carolina Hotel.

Mrs. W. T. Bost, State welfare commissioner, will welcome the delegates at the morning meeting presided over by C. W. Phillips, chairman of the Guilford county welfare board.

Col. W. A. Blair, Winston-Salem, chairman of the State Board of Charities and Public Welfare, will speak at the morning session on the history, development and duties of county welfare boards.

Col. Blair is now serving his forty-ninth year as a member of the state board and his thirty-fifth year as chairman of the organization. So long connected with the North Carolina Welfare program, Col. Blair, more than anyone else in the state, is better equipped to give a first-hand and personal knowledge of this subject.

An open forum in which members of county welfare boards will participate in discussion of common problems relating to the welfare program in their respective counties will be a feature of the session.

Nathan H. Yelton, director of public assistance and secretary of the State Board of Allotments and Appeal, will discuss the problem of financial administration in public welfare.

An open discussion of the merit system of personnel selection is expected to bring to the members attending the conference considerable information on the forthcoming merit system to be instituted for all state and county welfare employees.

Ella Downing, Stokes county welfare superintendent, said this week she expected the full delegation from this county to consist of W. F. Marshall and Roy Redding, chairman of the Stokes county board. Mrs. Laura Ellington, also a member of the board, will be unable to attend because of her mother's illness.

Jail Break Wednesday Night

Howard Snow, Morris Brown, Dick Fulk and Enoch Howard, colored prisoners, escaped from the jail here Wednesday night.

Dick Fulk was returned to the jail Thursday by his father, of Walkertown. No clues as to the whereabouts of the other three escapees have been discovered by the officers.

The escape was made from the cell into the hall by opening the door, which was not injured in any way, just apparently unlocked. Two other prisoners, besides the escaping four, refused to follow them and remained in the cell.

A barred window leading from the hall to an outside porch was negotiated by sawing one of the iron bars in twain. From the porch to the ground, a distance of some 20 feet, the prisoners let themselves down by blankets tied together.

The escape was evidently led by Howard Snow, who had been caught at Walnut Cove by Deputy Sheriff Carl Wall and State Patrolman Bristol Dellinger. The negro had in his possession a kit of burglars' tools, also a 45 revolver. Where he came from, nobody knows.

The other three escapees were Morris Brown of South Carolina, charged with breaking and entering; Dick Fulp of Walnut Cove, charged with assault with a deadly weapon; Enoch Howard, of Walnut Cove, charged with drunk driving.

All were in jail awaiting court next week.
