Rationing Death of Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Cox

Reports show that many merchants are confused about how to count and how to group the point rationing stamps they collect from their customers and pass on to their suppliers. The correct procedure is very simple. To aid merchants, the OPA has issued the following guide:

Separate all stamps that expire on a single date: 1. By color. 2. By denomination.

Blue stamps, example: All G, H and J blue stamps must be spent by June 10 or deposited by June 20.

1. Keep those stamps from all others.
2. Place 1 point stamps in a separate envelope.
3. Place 2 point stamps in a separate envelope.
4. Place 5 point stamps in a separate envelope.
5. Place 8 point stamps in a separate envelope.

Place blue stamps of the same point value only in the same envelope. Check the color. Check the denomination. Caution: Not more than 500 stamps may be placed in one envelope.

Suggestions for small stores: If you put only small numbers of stamps in each envelope you can care for small orders quickly.

Red stamps: All E, F, G, H, and J red stamps must be spent by June 10 or deposited by June 20.

Bear in mind the fact that red stamps differ from blue stamps. Red stamps have a weekly beginning date for use by consumers, but a number of them have the same expiration date. Place all that expire at the same time in that envelope in the same way as described for blue stamps above.

Seal each envelope firmly. This protects your account. Write on the front of each envelope.

1. The commodity which the stamps buy.
2. The point denomination of the stamps.
3. The number of stamps in the envelope.
4. The total point value of all stamps in the envelope.
5. The name and address of the business.

Fellowships Available At State College For Woman Graduates

Raleigh, May 4.—Twenty fellowships valued at approximately $1,200 each are available at N. C. State College for selected young women who have graduated from college recently or will graduate in the class of 1943. Prof. L. L. Vaughn, dean of the School of Engineering, announced today.

The fellowships were provided by Pratt and Whitney Aircraft, of Hartford, Conn., to give the young women a special course preparing them to become engineering aides in the company's Hartford plant, where the famous Wasp and Hornet engines are built. The course will last 48 weeks.

Under the plan, each fellow will receive tuition, books, fees, room, board, laundry and an allowance to cover incidental expenses.

Women completing the course satisfactorily will start work at a salary of $140 monthly on a 40-hour week, with time and a half for overtime. At the end of six months they will be eligible for a raise.

As engineering aides, they will assist engineers in a vital part of the victory effort. Later, they will be integrated with the post-war development of Pratt and Whitney in the rehabilitation of the world's airlines.

Dean Vaughn said the course will commence with State College's regular summer session June 16 and will end June 1, 1944. The course of study, designed specifically for graduates of liberal arts colleges, will include mathematics, physics, chemistry, engineering, drawing, mechanical laboratory, metallurgy and industrial engineering.

Qualified young women were invited by Dean Vaughn to write for further information to Prof. R. E. Rice, of the Department of Mechanical Engineering, which is sponsoring the program.

The only school in the South selected for the fellowships, State College was chosen because its graduates in mechanical engineering have proven their merit as successful engineers with Pratt and Whitney.

Other schools participating in the program are Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Ohio, Syracuse, Bucknell, Connecticut and New Hampshire universities.

Pratt and Whitney Aircraft has been developing the training program since the war emergency began.

A fellow, while single, was in the habit of going to a certain restaurant and ordering honey for his waffles. After he got married he took his wife to the same restaurant, ordered waffles, and not being served honey too with them, said to the waitress: Where's my honey?

Waitress—Oh, she doesn't work here any more.

Fathers who did not marry off their children before they were 18 were fined in Canada's early days.

The Army Buys Fighting Foods

The Quartermaster Corps has definite standards for army menus according to Mary I. Barber, Food Consultant to the Secretary of War. The food provided is called the "Army Ration." To aid in making up this "ration", lists of foods are set up as guides for the purchasing agent to follow. These include foods necessary for complete daily meals.

Milk and its products, butter, cheese and ice cream, are found on every list, along with meat and fish, cereals, eggs, fruits and vegetables. Master menus are made up for months in advance from the available products.

These master menus are put out each month and in every case at least a half pint of fluid milk together with additional milk in concentrated forms are included for each day. Butter is specified for each meal at the rate of 7 pounds per day for each hundred men, or more than double the average rate of butter consumption by civilians. In addition, dairy products are being served frequently during the month in the form of ice cream, cheese, cocoa made with milk, and in other ways.

"The superior food values of milk including calcium, riboflavin and proteins are important factors in maintaining our armed forces in better condition than any previous war," states Mrs. Ethel Austin Martin, Director, Nutrition Service of the National Dairy Council. "Intelligent use and distribution of the best available food supplies to the Army is proving an important factor in
