The Winning Team

President Roosevelt and Senator Truman were nominated at Chicago, and will undoubtedly be elected in November as President and Vice President of the United States, respectively.

The fact that President Roosevelt was nominated for a fourth term practically without opposition determines the overwhelming strength and popularity of this the greatest President in the history of the United States.

The naming of Senator Truman establishes an almost perfect harmony among the real Democrats.

The pacification of the Haters was not particularly undertaken by the convention nor specially desired.

In the judgment of the best political guessers in the nation, Mr. Dewey will not get to first base. In these terribly serious times of war, and the peace arrangements to be determined later, the American people will not be willing to swap horses in the middle of the turbulent stream. They will want the wisdom, the judgment and the experience of President Roosevelt.

And the Roosevelt administration will stand on its record, which is the most beneficent and the most constructive, both in the successful prosecution of the war and on the home economic front, in the history of the nation.
