Elk vs. Wild Bogs.

A stockman just in from the Wind River range tells a story of a fierce and sxciting battle between a courageous old slk and the wild dogs that infest the Wind River region. The river escapes from the mountains and hills into what s known as the basin district, over high and beautiful falls named the Maiden and beautiful falls named the Maiden trair. While riding near these fells a few lays ago the stockman's attention was attracted by a deep baying, and at once recognizing the sound as coming from the bayage dogs and realizing the necessity of getting out of the way, the borseman rode rapidly to the too of a aeighboring hill, which commanded an excellent view of the falls and also of the surrounding country. He had scarcely currounding country. He had scarcely teached the top of the hill when he saw, teached the top of the hill when he saw, dashing along a high ridge running parallel to the river, a magnificant elk, hotly chared by a doca or more mounting degs. The race had evidently been on for some time, for the elk appeared about exhausted and the degs were not in the best of condition. On swept the pursued and the pursuers, every bound bringing the degs nearer the haunches of the tired elk. Suddenly the elk changed his course and plunged down the side of the ridge, making straight for the falls. Overhanging the edge of the river, and towering directly above the pool at the foot of the falls, was a huge rock. On to this rock the bull made his way, and planting himself within a few feet of the planting himself within a few feet of the edge and with lowered antiers, awaited the attack. He did not have to white the attack. He did not have to white tong. The dogs came with a rush and nurled themselves it their prey. First one and their another dog was caught in the cik's antiers and sent howling into the depths below. Just when the fight was the hottest the rock, or ledge, upon which the battle was being fought, sud-lenly gave way, and with a crash the combatants were dropped into the water and rocks at the foot of the falls, and their bruised and oleeding remains were twept down the stream.—Globe Democrat.

A Bloomless Apple Tree. There is at the residence of Dr. Me-Laughlin, in the village of Leesburg Ohio, a curious freak of nature: an apple onlo, a curious freak of nature: an apple tree which bears regularly perfectly formed apples, but never blooms. The cuttings were originally brought to Fayette County by the early settlers, who carried them in saddlebags, and who thought that by the rough treatment which they received an route they would be worthless. One of them, however, grow and was characterized by the above phenomena. Some years ago the doctor, who is somewhat of a botanist, procured who is somewhat of a botanist, procured a graft from this remarkable tree, and to the surprise of all this too is devoid of bloom. An instance of this kind is not recorded in any scientific works on the subject. The tree was split and mutilated by storms last spring, necessitating the removal of several of its branches. The remainder is covered with foliage and remainder is covered with ioliage and loaded with embryo fruit. The apples are of a variety resembling the "bell-flower," and is a spiendid keeper. The owner cannot account for the absence bloom, and regards it as one of the mysteric management of natural which must terious problems of nature, which must forever remain unsolved. — Cincinnati Enquirer.

Where Sapphires Abound.

Among the countless objects which attracted our attention as we passed along, writes David Ker from Caylon, to the New York Time, were a number of strange-looking holes trenched in the green turf of the "patana," (grassy upland,) which extended for lone distance on either side of the footpath. Each hole the careller in from and perhaps 4 feet. was circular in form, and, perhaps, 4 feet wide by about 3 deep, and all around its mouth lay strewn heaps of white gravel, which glinted brightly in the aunshine.

"You would never guess what these things really are," said Mr. W., pointing to one of the holes. "These are what we call 'genuming places,' and it's in amount this gravel that they fird the famous sapphires which you saw in the jewelers'
shor at Colombo."

"Do they find many of them here about?" asked I. "Well, that depends—sometimes they do, and sometimes they don't. There are always plenty of fellows at work. I've seen as many as forty or lifty natives squatting round here at the same time and hunting for gents. But the luck's very uncertain. Some-times they it dig half a dozen pits without finding anything, and then they'll come all at once upon a whole fiatful r. the best stones. There egain, they often find a great many stones that are all of the light blue kind, which are worth hardly anything, the dark sapphires being the really valuable fort. I can remember the time when you could come down here and buy for a few rupces (half dollars) a sapphire that would be worth pounds on pounds in England. But now there's some big jewels at home sending out his agents to buy up all the e dark sap-phires wherever they can meet them, and the consequence is that these native chaps know the value of an uncut stone as well as the lewelers them elves and drive a pretty hard bargain with you when you want to make a led." It is said that in going from his palace to Westminister Abbey, the Bishop of London passes buildings devoted to the liquor inter-ests in which the commissioners of the Church of England have invested trust funds

A moment later he heard a sharp cry and saw the hawk slowly rife. The ascent was apparently very difficult for the hawk. Mr. Bennett saw that it had a dark object in its talons, which he supposed to be a rabbit. He watched the hawk closely, and when it had reached an altitude of perhaps 100 feet it gave a shrill try and fell heavily to the ground. Mr. Bennett went to the spot where the hawk fell and was surprised to find in a death grip in its talons a lifeless weasel. Examining the talons a lifeless weasel. Examining the hawk, Mr. Bennett found an ugly rent in its throat, which had evidently been made by the weasel's teeth, and which caused its death. With much difficulty he removed the weasel from the talous of the heavy. The claws type such to their the hawk. The claws were sunk to their full depth in the sides of the animal, and one had doubtless penetrated its heart. The hawk is one of the largest ever seep in the locality. SALT-RHEUM

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Aug. Isth, 1887.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Aug. Isth, 1887.

TION, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.:

Gentlemen—For several years I have felt it to be my duty to give to you the facts in relation to the complete cure of a most aggravated case of salt-rheum, by the use of your vasted case of salt-rheum, by the use of your "Golden Medical Discovery." An elderly lady relative of mine had been a great sufferer from salt-rheum for upwards of forty years. The disease was most distressing in her hands, causing the skin to crack open on the inside of the fingers at the joints and between the fingers. She was obliged to protect the raw places by means of adhesive plasters, salves, ointments and bandages, and during the winter months had to have her hands dressed daily. The pain was quite severe at times and her general health was badly affected, paving the way for other diseases to creep in. Catarrh and rheumatism caused a great deal of suffering in addition to the salt-rheum. She had used faithfully, and with the most commendable perseverance, all the remedies prescribed by her physicians, but without obtaining relief. She afterwards began treating hereolf by drinking teas made from blood-purifying roots and herbs. She continued this for several years but derived no benefit. Finally, about ten years ago, I chanced to read one of Dr. Pierce's small pamphlets setting forth the merits of his 'Golden Medical Discovery' and other medicines. The name struck my fancy, and seeing that it was essentially a blood-purifier, I immediately recommended it to the old lady who had been so long a sufferer from salt-rheum. She commenced taking it at once, and took one bottle, but seemed to be no better. However, I realized that it would take time for any medicine to effect a change for the better, and encouraged her to continue. She then purchased a half-a-dozen bottles, and before these had all been used she began to notice an improvement. After taking about a dozen bottles she was entirely cured. Her hands were perfectly well and as smooth and healthy as a child's. Her general health was also greatly improved; the rheumatism entirely left her, and the catarrh was almost cured, so that it ceased to be much annoyance. She has enjoyed excellent health from that day to this, and has had no return of either salt-rheum or rheumatism. The 'Discovery seems to have entirely cradicated the salt-rheum from her system. She is now over eighty years old, and very healthy for one of such extreme age.

My wife took it as directed, and as a result she is so she can work now." IVE YEARS' mily, with good GAINED 25 POUNDS.
