"Why Should We Weep?"

[From poems from "Two Brothers."]

Why should we weep for those who die?
They fall, their dust returns to dust;
Their souls shall live eternally
Within the mansion of the just.

They live to die, they sink to rise,
They leave this wretched mortal shore;
But brighter suns and bluer skies
Shall smile on them for evermore.

Why should we sorrow for the dead?
Our life on earth is but a span;
They tread the path that all must tread,
They die the common death of man.

The noblest songsters of the dale
Must cease when Winter's frowns appear;
The reddest rose is wan and pale
When Autumn tints the changing year.

The fairest flower on earth must fade,
The brightest hopes of earth must die;
Why should we mourn that man was made
To droop on earth, but live on high?

The soul, th' eternal soul, must reign
In worlds devoid of pain and strife;
Then why should mortal man complain
Of death, which leads to happier life?

ALFRED TENNYSON.

National Capital Matters.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 2, 1893.

The new tariff bill is the principal topic of conversation among Congressmen, now quite plentiful in Washington and becoming more so upon the arrival of every train. There is much less "kicking" among Democrats than the members of the committee expected, and very much less than existed among Republicans after the publication of the McKinley bill. The fact is generally recognized by Democrats that the Wilson bill is one that will in the end be generally beneficial to the entire country, although like most great reforms it will necessarily carry temporary hardships to some individuals, and that is really where the great strength of the bill lies: it is a tariff bill for the many, not for the few. The Democrats who framed it are true believers in the doctrine of the greatest good to the greatest number. The Republicans who in disparagement of the bill said it was built upon the lines of the Walker tariff of 1846, could hardly have given the bill greater praise, as the Walker tariff was one of the best the country ever had, and the people of all classes were never more prosperous than while it was in existence.

President Cleveland has congratulated the Democrats of the Ways and Means committee upon the statesmanlike manner in which they prepared the tariff bill, in several instances members voting to put articles on the free list, such as iron ore, coal and silver lead ore, that their constituents would have preferred having kept on the dutiable list, and in his message to Congress he will officially commend their work and urge that the bill be speedily passed.

The Democrats of the Ways and Means committee are now at work upon the internal revenue bill which is to furnish the revenue that will be lost by reforming the tariff. It is estimated that this loss will be somewhere between $30,000,000 and $50,000,000 a year. The Democrats of the committee have but one thought in preparing this bill, and that is, to impose the taxes in such a manner that they will bear the lightest upon those who have to work for their living, and as they are all men of wide experience and great ability they will doubtless report a satisfactory bill.

The peremptory removal of Mr. George D. Johnson, of Louisiana, the only Democratic member of the Civil Service Commission, by President Cleveland was surprising and has been the basis of no end of gossip. No official reason has been given for the removal and it is not at all probable that any will be given out, but it comes from good authority that the cause of Mr. Johnson's removal was not discreditable to him, as a man or as a Democrat. He will be succeeded by Prof. J. R. Proctor, of Kentucky, and Commissioner Lyman whose removal has been, I am told, fully determined upon, by a Democrat. There is ample cause for Lyman's removal, in the report of a Congressional committee to President Harrison, and he probably owes his retention in office this long, as many other Republicans do, to the fact that President Cleveland has been constantly overwhelmed with more important duties than the selection of successors to minor officials. But unless all signs are misleading, the most of the Republicans will go before the flowers bloom again.

President Cleveland did not eat his Thanksgiving Day dinner at the White House, although the steward had obtained a forty-pound turkey for the occasion. He and Mrs. Cleveland dined with the Postmaster General and Mrs. Bissell.

Too Careless with the English Language

A clothing dealer, in Boston, advertised all-wool pantaloons for $2, advising the public to make haste and secure the great bargain, saying: "They will not last long." Probably they would not. Neither will your health last long if you don't take care of it. Keep Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets in your house. They are indispensable to every family, as they positively cure biliousness, with its endless train of distressing ailments—sick headache, irritability, constipation, dizziness and indigestion: a marvelous specific for liver and kidney troubles, and a pure vegetable compound. They are sugar-coated, the smallest pills made, and the best, because they do all they promise. All druggists sell them, and the proprietors guarantee them, and refund the price if they fail.

TIMES ARE GETTING BETTER.

Bill Arp Thinks That Congress Had Nothing to Do With It.

It looks like the times are getting better. I don't know that legislation at Washington has had anything to do with it. In fact I believe the panic would have passed away just as soon without the repeal as with it, considering that it took three months to do it. The laws of trade are more powerful than the laws of Congress. The panic came just like comets come, and it will go just like the comet goes. Like the comet, it came unexpected, but it takes longer for it to disappear, for confidence is a plant of slow growth.

So far as trade is concerned, we see no difference between now and a year ago. The stores are thronged with customers, especially from the country. Cotton does not bring a good price, but there is lots of it, and the kind-hearted farmer will spend some of the proceeds on his wife and children. Hats and cloaks and Sunday shoes must be had. Cotton keeps on rolling in and the last little boll has opened. The late fall and beautiful weather has added not less than 20 per cent to the crop in north Georgia, and almost every farmer is selling some and keeping some back for a higher price. It may go to 8 cents next spring, but I believe that the time has passed when cotton will bring more than 8 cents. Its average will probably be 7½ cents, for there will be no more short crops.

The yearly increase of acreage in Texas will make up for all disasters elsewhere. There is still a world of unsettled land out there and it is being settled by immigration. They can make cotton at 5 cents a pound and they will keep on making it. The production will exceed the consumption—the supply will exceed the demand, and of course the price will be low. Burning gin houses or passing Alliance resolutions will not have the slightest effect. The laws of supply and demand are inexorable and nobody but fools and demagogues will ever preach anything else to the people. I remember when cotton sold for 5 and 6 cents a pound every year and was hauled 200 miles in wagons to market, and the people didn't complain as much as they do now.

I don't believe much of these charges against white caps burning gin houses. Every fire that takes place now-a-days is laid to incendiaries, when, the truth is, most of them are from carelessness or natural causes. Of course, there are some lawless vagabonds tramping over the country, and it does seem like there are more this fall than usual. Sometimes they burn stables and barns, so as to rob the dwelling while the family are at the fire. But the tramps don't go about in droves like they do up North—up there it is a very respectable profession. They map out their routes, and start without scrip or purse. They know who keeps dogs and who don't—who will let them sleep in the barn and give them something to eat and who won't. They know the charitable widows, and never slight them. I didn't know how they could travel over a thickly settled country until I was up in Ohio the other day. I was told about a rich, kind-hearted old widow who made it a specialty to feed them for the Lord's sake. When they called, she gave them welcome and a lunch and a cup of coffee and bade them God-speed. She always kept a pot of coffee on the stove for the tramps. One day when they had eaten all her ready supplies, another one came along and she had nothing left but a piece of bread. As she gave it to him she repeated her customary benediction, "Not for my sake, nor for your sake, but for Christ's sake, I give you this bread." The tramp smiled and said: "Not for your sake, nor for my sake, but for Christ's sake, put some butter on it." She did so, and he tramped on.

A widow who lives not far away from us killed a fat shoat the other day and concluded to leave it out in the back piazza to cool off during the night. But she consulted old Jack, the darkey, about whether it would be safe to leave it out there. "I don't know, mam—it's powerful consartin dar' some strange tramps gwine around. Eber since dese dimmercraticks got de country everything are gwine wrong—dat's what dey tells me." This reminds me of a speech Alex. Stephens made away back in the '40's, when the strife was very bitter, and he charged the Democrats with being responsible for the short crop and the yellow fever in Savannah, and lots of fools believed it.

I don't know how it is in an all cotton region, but in north Georgia and Tennessee and Kentucky I don't see any signs of distress, especially outside of the towns. The country is in a good, healthy condition. Right here in Bartow where corn and meat used to come by the carload, there is no corn and but little meat coming now. The county is full of corn and it brings 55 cents in this market. Country cured bacon is quite common. Chickens, eggs and potatoes are plentiful. Everything the farmer has to sell brings a fair price except wheat. The big crops in the West and low rates of freight have brought wheat down. The silver question had nothing no do with it, but thousands of prejudiced people will charge it to the Democratic administration. This reminds me of what Carlyle, the great historian, said about his people: "England has a population of 30,000,000—mostly fools." I don't say that about our people, but it does seem like the fools and knaves together raise a powerful commotion. If an intelligent stranger should come over here from Europe and read our papers on both sides of party questions he would be amazed and bewildered, and finally would set us down with Carlyle's crowd.

All this crimination and recrimination is a sad commentary upon political fairness and integrity, but it is no new thing and will never cease, I reckon. It was just as bad in the days of Washington and Jefferson as it is now. The government has got used to it. It has survived the shock of it and the scandal of it for a century, and so we need not fear. The wheels will roll on. Generations will come and go just like they have done. The good will have to endure and suffer for the bad, but they stand on a sure foundation and will always triumph in the long run. "Truth crushed to earth will rise again."

Playing Jesse James.

Charlotte Observer.

Two miles from Gastonia live Mr. Wm. Summey and family. Near them live C. P. Hoyle and son, Jo Hoyle. Yesterday the latter attempted to play the Jesse James act, and there came very near being several lives lost therefor. Jo Hoyle, it seems, while under the influence of whiskey, went to Mr. Summey's and not finding any one in the house, went to the kitchen. Mr. Summey, his wife and son, Craig, were in the there. Hoyle walked in, pistol in hand, and flourishing it in the air, asked if they knew anything about Jesse James. He told them he (Hoyle) was a robber and desperado, and was going to kill them. He knocked old man Summey down, then knocked his wife down twice. Craig Summey, the son, aged about 18 years, got up to go to his mother's assistance, when Hoyle covered him with the pistol and threatened to shoot if he interfered. Young Summey ran out of the kitchen into the house got his gun, and coming back, opened fire on Hoyle. One load took effect in his hip, making a bad wound, but one not necessarily serious.

Long Division in Stanly.

Stanly News.

An estate was settled by the administrators before our clerk of the Superior Court the other day in which some of the heirs received the six hundred and ninety-third part of the estate. They were great-grandchildren, and there were seven of them. Their grandfather had nine children, and their great-grandfather whose estate was settled, had eleven children, so the great-grandchildren received one-seventh of one-ninth of one-eleventh, or one-six hundred and ninety-third of the estate.

The Bible Didn't Save Him.

At the last term of Jones Superior Court a negro was convicted of stealing a mule. Before sentence was pronounced the judge gave him an opportunity to speak for himself and he said: "I wouldn't er tuck de mule nohow of I hadn't er red in de Testermint whar Jesus tuck a mule." The judge remarked: "Yes, but he didn't ride him to Kinston and try to sell him;" and thereupon he gave the negro three years in the penitentiary.

Last Week in Trade Circles.

Special Correspondence.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4, 1893.

Business during the last week has as a rule been very quiet. The recurrence of a general holiday has interrupted trade. To some extent a feeling of hesitancy has been influenced by the publication of the Wilson Tariff bill and the nearness of the time for the reassembling of Congress. Business men will naturally avail themselves of the opportunity which has been afforded them to adjust their affairs so that they may secure the best results from the proposed changes in legislation. The operations of merchants and manufacturers have been so greatly curtailed, as a result of the recent financial disturbances, that the process of readjustment to new conditions will involve less derangement of business and industry than under other circumstances.

Merchandise stocks all over the country have been reduced to minimum proportions, and values in many lines have reached the limit of depreciation. Recovery from this low level of production and distribution should be more rapid now that business men have been made familiar with the facts and figures concerning proposed legislation, and are no longer handicapped by uncertainty or the more hurtful effects of blind apprehension. The failures during the last week throughout the United States and Canada aggregated 326, a decrease of 95 from the total of the preceding week.

The movement of cotton from the South has continued liberal, and demand for export and for home consumption has been less than active. Prices have declined 1-16 of a cent in this country and the equivalent of ⅛ of a cent in Liverpool. In the cotton goods trade there has been moderately increased activity, and some revision of prices both to a higher and a lower basis. An advance of ⅛ of a cent has been realized on print cloths, and on similar qualities of staple cottons, while prices of wide sheetings have been slightly reduced; and the tendency has been downward on some lines of bleached goods in which the decline had not previously equaled the reduction in competing makes.

Wheat prices have advanced ½ to ¾ of a cent per bushel. The change is unimportant except as an indication of a less bearish sentiment in the market, which has been so long and so steadily tending in an opposite direction. There has been no improvement in the foreign demand; but interior receipts have fallen off, and there are indications that the maximum accumulation of visible stocks will be reached at an earlier date than was the case during the previous crop year, when wheat supplies continued to pile up at commercial centres until well into the new year. Stocks are now larger than ever before at the corresponding period; but the weekly additions are decreasing, and are likely soon to cease altogether. Exports of wheat, including flour, so far during this crop year have aggregated 85,726,589 bushels, as against 74,319,441 bushels a year ago.

Current weekly totals compare unfavorably with those of last season; but notwithstanding the recent decline, the shipments from this crop have thus far been 11,000,000 bushels larger than from the crop of 1892. On the basis of a crop yield of 440,000,000 bushels the Cincinnati Price Current estimates that the invisible supplies of wheat in this country are 110,000,000 bushels less than they were a year ago. This decrease, if accurately estimated, will have an important bearing upon the future of prices, although its effects may not be sensibly felt until the visible accumulation shall have begun to run down. Hard freezing weather in the West, after recent rains, has increased apprehension concerning the fall-sown grain, the growth of which had been previously retarded by drought.

Corn prices have declined about as much as those of wheat have advanced. The interior movement has increased, and farmers have shown more disposition to sell. There has been a fair inquiry for corn for export; but advantages in freight rates have turned most of the business to Southern ports. There is evidence of rate cutting in the fact that Western shippers are paying 5 to 6 cents per bushel more for corn at Mississippi River points than they could afford to pay on the basis of seaboard quotations if full schedule rail freight rates should be added to the price. Values of provisions show but slight changes.

The One-hoss Shay.

The peculiar feature of the "one-hoss shay" was, that it was "built in such a wonderful way" that it had no "weakest part." The "weakest part" of a woman is invariably her back, and "female weaknesses" are only too common. With the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, this may be avoided, and women may be comparatively as strong as their brothers. Prolapsus, inflammation, ulceration, periodical pains, leucorrhea, dragging-down sensations, debility, nervousness, sleeplessness, despondency, are only a few of the symptoms of weakness of the female organs which the "Favorite Prescription" is warranted to remove.

ALL OVER THE STATE.
