SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR

The Old Friend

And the best friend, that never fails you, is Simmons' Liver Regulator, (the Red Z)—that's what you hear at the mention of this excellent Liver medicine, and people should not be persons that anything else will do.

It is the King of Liver Medicines; it better than pills, and takes the place of Quinine and Calomel. It acts directly on the Liver, Kidneys and Bowels and gives new life to the whole system. This is the medicine you want. Sold by all Druggists in Liquid, or in Powder to be taken dry or made into a tea.

DR. J. H. HILL & SON, Philadelphia, Pa.

Old times in the country—there's the times for me! Never nothing like 'em an' never more will be! Wasn't an' railroad trains a-blowin' 'em an' freckles on my face? Then was all the brightest times—last o' times to me!

Old times in the country, where the sweetest violets growed! Best of all the best times that my heart has ever knowed! Foller loved a gal, he kissed the best an' sweetest one.

An' old folks did their knittin' by the doorway, in the sun.

Old times in the country—I kin see 'em still. Hear the cool, sweet callin' of the eposh-ahid whippoorwill! Hear the midnigh' singin' of the thrillin' 'moo-kin' birds!

An' best of all, the music of my sweet-heart's sweetest words!

Old times in the country—smoke a-curlin' in the air! From the old clay chimneys with the black-top 'em an' blue!

Old times in the country—wherever I may be, Them's the very best o' times to all my folks an' me!

STILL DISCUSSING STRIKES.

Arp Says Let Everybody Quit Work for a While at Least.

We are crowded now. What with all the ramifications of the big strike, the wide-spread war between capital and labor, the miserable contention over the tariff bill and the red-hot strife of candidates for office, our weak minds are kept on a continual strain. Every trade or occupation has got a union now, even to the barbers and the newsboys, and if these unions don't strike or boycott something occasionally the boys get lukewarm and quit paying their dues and that cuts off the salaries of the officers, and so they must get up a carousement to fire up the boys again.

I didn't care anything about my fence nor the corn patch, but there was the tree top in the poor widow's orchard. My wife and the girls came out to comfort me, but I wouldn't be comforted. How long would the widow be gone, I ruminated, and how long would it take to clean up things and repair the damage as far as possible? But we never stopped a minute. There were three of us now, all good hands, including myself. I never worked as hard in my life. I dragged off brush as fast as they could trim up the brushy top. I got the step ladder and sawed off the broken limbs of the apple trees and unloosed those that were fastened down. We cut up every part of the tree that was on the widow's side and cleaned up the fragments and then put a new post in the ground and brought planks and built up the fence again and replaced the barbed wire.

Every little while I looked down the lane to see if the widow was coming, but she didn't come. Then we cut up that part that was in the lane and we carried or rolled every piece to my woodpile, and by 5 o'clock you could hardly tell that a tree had fallen there at all. I was hot and tired and my garments stuck to my perspiring flesh. I looked again for the widow, and sure enough she was in sight. Putting on a smile, I said: "Well, the wind did take the tree down in your lot." She looked at the fence and the orchard, and said: "Well, I don't see where it fell, only better." "It broke a large limb from that beautiful apple tree," said I. "Well, that doesn't matter, she said, 'it hardly ever bears any fruit, and when it does the apples are not much account.'" "There was a young peach tree there," said I, "but it isn't there now." "Just a volunteer," she said, "and they were too thick, anyhow."

It is not the very poor who are raising all this racket. It is the able-bodied men who have employment at living wages. I heard a farmer say yesterday that they could get along if labor was not so high and no doubt his laborers are growing because wages are not higher, and so it goes. The farmer grumbles because what is down to 60 cents a bushel and the laborer would reduce it to 50 cents if he could. And yet all classes who are not rich enough to live without work sympathize with the strike, and in its last analysis the prime cause is envy and selfishness. How rich will a man be allowed to get and still have the good will of his poorer neighbors? How poor must a man get before he will have the help and pity of the rich? But every day the press ventilates the whole business and everybody knows all about it.

It was a relief when Mrs. Arp told me this morning she wanted that big red oak that stood near the corner of the garden cut down. I've been hinting about that a long time, but she is opposed to cutting down shade trees, and so I never argued the case at all. I never do. Some years ago I proposed to thin out the trees in the front yard but she objected. While she was off to Rome on a visit I got the boys and we cut down three of them level with the ground and didn't leave a sign of a stump, and we hauled away every chip and scrap and covered the places with grass and she never found it out for two months, and wouldn't have then, but one of the mischievous girls remarked one day that we didn't see to see the hills as plain as we do now, and my wife caught on to the business right away. She always does. But she suggested this morning that that oak would have to come down and it would give us more garden.

A Successful Lady Farmer.

On our return from Dobson Monday we passed the beautiful farm of Mrs. Stacy Jones. This farm is one of the neatest, best kept and by careful cultivation and management has been made one of the most productive in the county. A few years ago Mr. Jones died leaving four small children. The farm was mortgaged for $1,800. Mrs. Jones undertook the management of the farm and has been very successful. She has paid off the mortgage, built a new and comfortable two-story residence and besides has saved considerable money. In the meantime her farm has greatly increased in value. This is a record that almost any man might be proud of. Indeed, in the last few years there have been few men who have done near so well as Mrs. Jones.

The Dr. Imparts Valuable Information.

We cannot recall a summer in which so many fatal lightning strokes have been reported in North Carolina. Lessons might be learned. For fifty years we have known that it is not safe to sit with open doors and windows, nor chimneys, or to take refuge under trees, or to stand or lie near horses and mules in a thunder storm. We have known a great many people to be killed by failing to observe ordinary safe precautions. We have known of people being killed sitting at open windows, or in the door or passage-way, also when riding or driving horses and mules, and often by going under trees in a rain.
