

The Curse of Mankind!

The most horrible disease to which the human family is subject is contagious blood poisoning. It has always baffled the doctors, for notwithstanding the progress made in some branches of medicine, they have failed absolutely to discover a cure for it. Whether in the form of powder, pill or liquid, the doctor's prescription is always the same—potash or mercury.

Mr. Otto H. Elbert, who resides at the corner of 22d Street and Avenue N., Galveston, Texas, had a severe experience with this dreadful disease, and under date of April 24, 1895, writes:

"Several years ago I was so unfortunate as to contract contagious blood poisoning, and was under treatment of the best physicians continuously for four years. As soon as I discovered that I had the disease, I hastened to place myself under the care of one of the foremost doctors in my State, and took his treatment faithfully for several months. It was a very short time after he pronounced me well, that the disease broke out afresh, and I was in a far worse condition than at first. Large lumps formed on my neck, my throat was filled with sores, and a horrible ulcer broke out on my jaw. After being treated again with no success, I became disgusted and changed doctors. I was given the usual treatment of mercury, and took enough to kill an ordinary man. Of course, I was pronounced cured, but a dozen times the disease returning each time, until my physician finally admitted that he could do me no good. I am sure that no one was ever in a worse fix than I was. I had fallen by the hands of my feet were so swollen that I could scarcely walk, and I was in a sad plight.

"I had seen S. S. S. advertised as a cure for this disease, and determined to try it, and before I had taken one bottle I felt much better. I continued to take the remedy, and a dozen bottles cured me completely, so that for five years I have had no sign of the terrible disease. S. S. S. is the greatest blood remedy of the age, and it is a God-send to those afflicted with contagious blood poisoning."

For fifty years S. S. S. has been curing this terrible disease, even after all other treatment failed. It is guaranteed.

A Colony of Evangelists.

A colony of evangelists has purchased a tract of land at Ormond, Fla., and will locate their winter headquarters there for evangelized work throughout the State. The tract is the finest body of land in that section. It is located between the Halifax river and the Atlantic ocean, and fronts on both. It is covered with a heavy growth of plants and live oaks, and has long borne the name of "Hunters' Camp" from its inviting and favorable situation and convenience for such parties. The evangelists are an incorporated society, holding their property in Jersey City, which Pastor M. Hancock is president and R. Jackson is secretary. Preparations for extensive building are now going forward, and they expect to develop the natural advantages of the place into a first-class camp-ground of the South, where a first-class work to that in New Jersey will be centered for advancing non-sectarian and scriptural piety.

Drought Every Nineteen Years.

H. C. Russell, a scientific man of New South Wales, announces as a result of a prolonged examination of history, from the earliest times that seasons of drought recur with unvarying regularity at intervals of nineteen years. Of 218 droughts recorded since the year 900, all but 15 conform to his theory, which is that there are every nineteen years one long period of three years, during which the rainfall is somewhat deficient, and a shorter period between each of the long periods when the deficiency is excessive. He even finds a confirmation of the Bible chronology in the fact that the dates of the Egyptian drought during King David's reign, that told by Elijah and that predicted by Elisha all fall into the nineteen-year period.

Wearing Out Needlessly.

Many people wear themselves out needlessly; their conscience is a tyrant. An exaggerated sense of duty leads a person to anxious, ceaseless activity, to be constantly doing something, over-punctual, never allowing a second of time to pass without such an amount of nervous tension. They say they have no time to rest, they have so much to do, not thinking they are rapidly uniting themselves for probably what would have been their last and greatest work in after years.

If we could trace Despair to its source, it would lead back to our lineaments. In fact, the secret of good health is good cooking. If well cooked, food is partially digested. If poorly cooked, they are less digestible than in their raw state. If you are a victim of indigestion, this is the cause. You suffer from dyspepsia, the rational cure must be looked for in an artificially digested food, and a food which will at the same time aid the digestion of other foods. Such a preparation virtually rests the tired digestive organs, thereby restoring them to their normal strength.

The Digestive Cordial, as prepared by the Shakers of Mount Lebanon, is just such a preparation, and a single 10-cent bottle will convince you of its value. If you distrust it, send for a trial bottle, and you will find it to be what you need to get it through his wholesome house.

Laxative is the best medicine for children. Doctors recommend it in place of Castor Oil.

Stiffness always pinches its owner the hardest.

"I have been a victim to terrible headaches," writes C. F. Newman, Ding Spur, Va., "and have never found anything to relieve them so quickly as Ayer's Pills. Since I began taking this medicine, the attacks have been less frequent, and they have ceased altogether."

Our neighbors are those who need our help most.

The difference between Pills and Simmons' Liver Regulator, is just this: Pills don't go down very easy with most people, and you feel them afterwards. While Simmons' Liver Regulator is liquid or powder, it is pleasant to take, and by only feeling that you have afterwards the great relief that it gives from Constipation, Biliousness, Sick Headache and Dyspepsia. It is a mild laxative and a tonic.

You will find every candidate is a friend of labor.

HOOD'S Sarsaparilla has over and over again proved by its cures, when all other preparations failed, that it is the One True BLOOD Purifier.

Some people marry bad luck, and others inherit it.

How Shoes Are Made.

In Brockton, Mass., the queen of all our "Shoe Cities," stands the massive framework, glittering with myriad windows, of the W. L. Douglas Shoe Co.'s factory, where bales of leather change with marvelous rapidity into famous shoes. The shoemaker's bench of "yesteryear" has disappeared, and in its place ponderous machinery, stamp and groove and rose bunches of leather from one to another like a pack of dogs working some hapless little animal, till the senseless leather that the cutters pounce upon in the long room at the top of the building comes riding into the pack-room, a rack for its carriage, a polished and shapely shoe.

Probably no place in the world offers such a splendid object lesson in shoe making as does the Douglas factory, where everything has been systematized down to the minutest detail, and so carefully arranged that a walk through the streets of this busy little world of a factory illustrates clearly the development of the shoe.

First comes the cutting room. Here is little machinery, but leather is everywhere, from the scraps that litter the floor and fill the bins, to the neatly piled "wamps" and "tops" arranged on racks, each pile labeled with the name of the center. The most marvelous thing in connection with this part of the work is the ingenious system whereby every bit of leather is kept track of. The foreman maps out the work; that is, he determines there shall be so many boxes of shoes cut that day and each box shall have so many pairs of a certain size. The cutters, each doing but a single thing, snags cutting a "wamp" gets his leather and goes to work, trimming the leather with a curved knife, according to a metal pattern. His work passes under the experienced eye of an inspector, who, at a single glance, judges the quality of the leather and sorts it into different grades.

It seems hopeless confusion; yet every bit of leather inevitably finds its mate of the proper grade and size when they all appear in the sewing room below, pursued by a relentless check list watched to detect the slightest deviation from the right road. In this room is a wilderness of machines, many of which are run by women. Up at one end of the room the cut leather starts on a rapid journey. One machine seizes it and lifts it a few times and seems to toss it away speedily. Immediately it is thrust into the jaws of another machine that stitches it in another place until it comes out at the other end of the room in the shape of a shoe top.

Then the laster seizes upon it, to fit the top to the inner sole. Some of the shoes are "lasted" by hand, others by a peculiarly vicious looking machine, that spits out tiny nails, and pounds the unfortunate shoes with all the energy of a chain-linker calling to a cat. The Douglas people never hesitate to buy the most improved machinery, and all the latest methods may be seen in this room.

Down this room, too, the half-finished shoes pass rapidly. On goes the outer sole, sometimes by sewing machine, sometimes by a machine that serves the sole on with little brass screws, that the iron master has swallowed voraciously. With a single stamp the heel goes on, the rough edges being shaved off by a shaving knife. The channel made along the sole by the stitching machine is filled with cement, and under the angry scrutiny of a metal foot the channel is made flat again.

Now we have the completed shoe in the rough. But there are a dozen more machines, and a dozen more processes to be applied in the way of finishing touches. Finally, the shoe, resplendent in polish, neatly shaped and finished to the last detail, is wheeled on a rack before the eagle eye of the final inspector. If he passes it, the shoe is finished, and having followed the leather through the hands of five hundred and sixty workmen, the check list triumphantly receives its final endorsement, and we have a perfect shoe. Fifteen minutes is all the time they want to make a shoe, when they hurry matters.—Boston Watchman.

What a "Wed" Means.

Among the Anglo-Saxons the bridegroom gave a pledge or "wed" at the betrothal ceremony. This "wed" included a ring, which was placed on the maiden's right hand, where it remained until, at the marriage, it was transferred to the left. English women at one time wore the wedding ring on the thumb. Many portraits of ladies in Queen Elizabeth's days are so depicted. In the reign of George III brides usually removed the ring from its proper abiding place to the thumb as soon as the ceremony was over. In Spain the gift of a ring is looked upon as a promise of marriage and is considered sufficient proof for a maiden to claim her husband. It is a custom to pass little pieces of bride's cake through the wedding ring, and those to whom these pieces are given place them under their pillows at night to dream of their lovers. These "dreamers," as they are called, should be drawn nine times through the ring. Many brides, however, are so superstitious that neither for that purpose nor at any other time will they take the ring off their finger after it has once been placed there.

Each Man's Share of the Globe.

There is no immediate prospect that the divided surface of the globe will be divided up and allotted in equal shares to each of its human inhabitants, but if such a time ever does come it will be found that each will get a little truck farm of 250 acres. The landed surface of the globe contains, as near as it is possible for the geographers to ascertain, 33,000,000,000 acres which, divided among the 1,500,000,000 inhabitants which the world contains, according to the latest official estimates, would give each of them a tract of land of the area mentioned above.

Taking the entire population of the world into consideration there are almost exactly 28 inhabitants to each square mile. The following figures showing the number of persons, omitting fractions, in a square mile in the several divisions of the globe are from the best authorities on human family statistics: Europe, 88; Asia, 46; Africa, 18; North America, 2; South America, 4; Oceania and the polar regions, 2.

The Largest Railway.

The most gigantic railway enterprise ever undertaken is the Trans-Siberian Railway, which the Russian government is building from the Eastern borders of the empire proper to the Pacific coast. When completed, which it is calculated will be in 1904, this line will be nearly 5,000 miles in length—the longest in the world—and will have cost more than $200,000,000. Its completion will on the minimum schedule time of a journey around the world more than half, and will make it possible to circumvent the globe in something like 30 days—a feat surpassing all the dreams of the futurists.

The Babonic Plague.

The plague which has been raging for six months past at Bombay, and to some extent at other places in India, is considered to be "the true plague." In its general character it is identical with "the Black Death," which in the fourteenth century destroyed, it is said, 100,000 lives in London, the lives of seven-eighths of the population of England and some 25,000,000 persons, or one-fourth of the population of Europe. But sanitary science is supposed to have mitigated its violence or lessened its opportunities. In Bombay, with 750,000 inhabitants, the mortality is kept down to about 1,000 per week. Calcutta, with a million inhabitants, owing to efficient sanitation, is substantially free from the plague. At the first outbreak in the past year nearly every case was fatal. Up to the third week of November 230 persons had been attacked, and of these 57 died.

Its victims are almost uniformly very poor and ill-fed natives. The English seldom or never take the disease. The steps taken to purify the cities of India in order to protect them, consist chiefly in cleaning them by a liberal use of water. As in fighting the famine, so in fighting the plague, the Hindus are indebted to the arts and sciences of Europe. But for the foreign government, with its railroads and advanced ideas, the mortality of India would during the present affliction of famine and plague be increased doubtless by many millions.

The plague is a glandular fever, attended with a swelling of the groin. It is supposed to be unknown whether it is due to a microbe or to miasmatic conditions. It ravaged Hong-Kong a few years ago, destroying many thousands there. It is endemic in China and the Euphrates Valley, just as cholera has its home in the delta of the Ganges. London suffered from it in 1603 and again in 1720.

An Old Bala of Cotton.

W. C. Mills, of Floyd county, Georgia, brought a bale of cotton to Rome recently which had been lying under his father's gin house ever since the fall of 1822. John Mills grew the cotton on his plantation in Chatooga county during that year, and in the fall, after it was picked and ginned, the price went down, and the old man decided to hold it, feeling confident that it would go up to 20 cents a pound. Instead of that, the price continued to decline, and during all these years it has lain there waiting the rise in value that never came. Last winter the old man died, and his son took charge of his estate, and among the assets was the old bale of cotton, much weather-beaten, with the jagging very badly frayed and ties rusted, but the lint as white as on the day that it was ginned. The son tried to sell it, and it was purchased by Bass Bros. & Co. for 3.50 cents a pound, a fraction more than one-fourth the price for which the old man had held it so long.

Where Doctors Disagree.

There has been a great deal of disagreement from time to time about the therapeutic value of sarsaparilla. In the main, authorities deny any particular medicinal value to the plant. "It's just an old wife's remedy," they say. And in the main they are right. There are about a dozen varieties of sarsaparilla, scattered through various countries, and of this genus only one has any curative power. So a man whose experience might be confined to the eleven other varieties might honestly say there was little value in them. The one valuable sarsaparilla is found in Honduras, C. A. Mondard, a physician of Seville, records the introduction of sarsaparilla into Spain as a result of the Spanish discoveries of the New World, between 1536 and 1543. But the root did not accomplish much. But he adds, "a better sort soon after came from Honduras." It is this "better sort" that is used exclusively in Ayer's Sarsaparilla. And it is the use of this "better sort" that has given Ayer's Sarsaparilla prominence over all other varieties by reason of its wonderful cures of blood diseases. Most Wonderful City.

The most wonderful city within the limits of the United States, and which has no existence whatever during the summer months, is Fish City, Mich. This municipal oddity is built on the top of Saginaw bay regularly every winter and is occupied by men and their families who are engaged in catching, cleaning and packing lake trout and whitefish for the market. Fish City is situated in the same cove nearly every winter and is built of rough pine boards. In the winter of 1883-84 it had a population of nearly 3,000 and in 1894-95 almost twice that number.

The Happy Now Compared with The Melancholy Past.

"Saved My Life" A VETERAN'S STORY.

"Several years ago, while in Fort Snelling, Minn., I caught a severe cold, attended with a terrible cough, that allowed me no rest day or night. The doctors after exhausting their remedies, pronounced my case hopeless, saying they could do no more for me. At this time a bottle of AYER'S Cherry Pectoral was sent to me by a friend, who urged me to take it, which I did, and soon after I was greatly relieved, and in a short time was completely cured. I have never had much of a cough since that time, and I firmly believe Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved my life."—W. H. WAIRD, S. Quincy Ave., Lowell, Mass.

It's the old, old story, told over and over again since the dawn of creation. The story of the heart. It's a theme that never wearies. And yet the saddest stories of the heart are those of its disorders. It has been the most neglected organ in the body. There are thousands of cases of heart disease that never receive the proper treatment. The average doctor knows little of the heart, and treats the cases presented to him, as some other disorder and in this manner, patients, instead of being cured, are made worse. The testimony of the lady whose portrait appears above is pertinent. Dr. Miles' discoveries, relating to the heart and nerves, mark a new era in the treatment of disorders of these most vital organs. Heart disease, formerly considered beyond the pale of medical aid, has at last yielded the victory to Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure. The reports received by Dr. Miles' Medical Co., of cases where special advice is asked, show conclusively that in a majority of cases complete cures follow the faithful use of Dr. Miles' Restorative Remedies. The few failures are generally due to negligence on the part of the patient in not taking the remedies as directed.

"A severe attack of typhoid fever left me with heart trouble of the most serious nature. Nothing the doctors gave me seemed to have any effect. They gave the very strongest of heart medicines, but to no avail. I had severe pains in the region of the heart, and was unable to sleep or lie on my left side for more than three minutes at a time without great pain. My heart seemed to miss beats, and I had smothering spells, in which it seemed every breath would be the last I should draw on earth. We accidentally heard of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and Restorative. Nervine, and as a last resort we purchased a bottle of each. After taking the remedies a week, I could be lifted in a chair and sit up an hour. In two weeks I could walk about, and in a short time I was able to go light house-work and I am now well along on the road to health. I shall be ever grateful to you for your wonderful medicines and will praise them to everyone I know. Truly they saved my life. Hoping every one who uses Dr. Miles' Remedies will derive the same benefit that I have, I remain, Yours truly, Mrs. Chas. La Point, 312 Humboldt St., Denver, Colo.

The charm of domestic joy will be preserved, if those parents, who fear the early death of one of their loved ones when attacked with a serious throat or lung trouble, resort at once to Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, a never-failing remedy. "I used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup for my son, who was eight years old. He has been troubled with a bronchial cough since he was two and a half years of age, and I have tried everything, but found Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup does him the most good." Mrs. A. Gell, 317 Demott St., West Hoboken, N. J. Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup costs only 25 cents, and is cheaper than the dealer's big profit making substitute, because Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup always cures while the substitute does not.
