Subject: "Forgiveness Before Sun-

down,"

TEXT: "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath." - Ephesians iv., 26: what a pillow embroidered of a'l colors hath the dying day. The cradle of clouds from which the sun rises is beautiful enough, but it is surpassed by the many colored mausoleum in which at evening it is buried. Sunset among the mountains! It almost takes one's breath away to recall the scene. The long shadows stretching over the plain made the glory of the departing light on the tiptop crags and struck aslant through the foliage the more transpicuous. Softron and foliage the more transpicuous. Saffron and gold, purple and crimson commingled. All the castles of cloud in conflagration. Eurning Moscows on the sky. Hanging gardens of roses at their deepest bush. Bamers of vapors, red as if from carnage, in the battle of the elements. The hunter among the Adirondacks and the Swiss villager among the Alps know what is a sunset among the mountains. After a storm at sea the rolling grandeur into which the sun goes down to bathe at nightfall is something to make weird and splendid dreams cut of for a lifetime. Alexander Smith in his poem compares the sunset to "the barron beach of hell," pares the sunset to "the barren beach of hell," but this wonderful speciacle of nature makes me think of the burnished wall of heaven.
Paul in prison writing my text remember some of the gorgeous sunsets among the mountains of Asia Minor, and how he had often seen the towers of Damascus blaze in the close of the Oriental days, and he flashes
out that memory in the text when he says:
"Let not the sun so down more your wrat."

out that memory in the text when he says:

"Let not the san go down upon your wrath."

Sublime and all suggestive duty for people then and people now. Forgiveness before sundown. He who never feels the throb of indignation is inducide. He who can walk among the injustices of the world, inflicted upon himself and others, without flush of cheek or flash of eye or agitation of nature, is either in sympathy with wrong or semi-idiotic. When Ananias the high priest, ordered the constables of the court room to smite Paul in the mouth, I and first up and said: "God shalf smite thee, thou whited wall." In the sentence immediately before my text Paul commands the Ephesians: "Be ye angry and sin not." It all depends on what you are mad at, and how long the feeling lasis whether anger is right or wrong. ing lasts whether anger is right or wrong. Life is full of exasperations. Saul after David, Succoth after Gideon, Korah after Moses, the Pasquins after Augustus, the Pharisees after Christ, and every one has had his pursuers, and we are swindled or belied or misrepresented or persecuted or in some way wronged, and the danger is that healthful indignation shall become baleful spite, and that our feelings settle down into a prolonged outpouring of temper displeasing to God and ruinous to ourselves, and hence the important injunction of the text: "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath." Why that limitation to one's anger? Why that period of flaming vapor set to punctuate a flaming disposition? What has the sunset got to do with one's resentful emotions? Was it a haphazard sentiment written by Paul without special significance? No, no; I think of five reasons why we should not let the sun set before our temper sets.

First, because twelve hours is long enough to be cross about any wrong inflicted upon us. Nothing is so exhausting to physical health or mental faculty as a protracted in-else in the world. Any one can do the work and live at home. I ither sex, all ages. Something new, that just coins ages. Something new, that just coins money for all workers. We will start aside from his legitimate work, expands energies that ought to be better employed, and does us more harm than it does our antagothe genuine important chances of a life nist. Paul gives us a good, with alfrom 6 o'clock to 6 o'clock, but says: "Stop there!" Watch the descending orb of day, and when it reaches the horizon take a reef in your disposition. Unloose your collar and cool off. Change the subject to something delightfully pleasant. Unroll your tight fist and shake hands with some one. Bank up the fires at the curfew bell. Drive the growling dog of enmity back to its kennel. The hours of this morning will past by, and the afternoon will arrive, and the sun will begin to set, and I beg you on its blazing hearth throw all your feuds, invectives and

> Other things being equal the man who pressures good temper will come out ahead. An old essayist says that the celebrated John Henderson, of Bristol, England, was at a possible," you say, "I would have either left the table in anger or have knocked the man down." But I have come to believe that nothing is impossible, if God help me, since what I saw at Beth Shan faith cure in London, England two summers ago. While the religious service was going on Rev. Dr. Boardman, glorious man, since gone to his heavenly rest, was telling the score of sick people present that Christ was there as of old to heal all diseases, and that, if they would only believe, their sickness would depart. I saw a woman near me, that, if they would only believe, their sick-ness would depart. I saw a woman near me, with hand and arm twisted of rheumatism, and her wrist was flery with inflammation, and it looked like those cases of chronic rheumatism which we have all seen and sympathized with, cases beyond all human healing. At the preacher's reiteration of the words: "Will you believe! Do you be leve! Do you believe now?" I heard this poor sick woman say, with an emphasis which sounded through the building: "I do believe." And then she laid her twisted arm and hand out as straight as your earn and hand, or mine. If I had seen one ris from the dead I would not have been much more thrilled. Since then I believe that God will do anything in answer to our prayer and in answer to our faith, and can heal our bodies, and if our soul is all twisted and misshapen of revenge and hate and inflamed with sinful proclivity, and clean. Aye, you will not postpone till sundown forgiveness of enemies if you can realize that their behavior toward you may be put into the catalogue of the "all things" that "work together for good to these that love God." I have had multitudes of frien s, but I have found in my own experience that God to arranged it that the great st opportunities of usefulness that have been at before me were opened by my enem es. And when, years ago, they conspired agains shovel and bury the old grudge at least six me, that opened all Christendom to me as a feet deep. "Let not the sun go down on your who are well known, have not lived together for some months. Under the arrangement made between the couple Mrs. Browne was to have the custody of their child, a girl four years old, and of excep ional beauty, and he was to have I emission to visit the child at intervals. For several weeks he has not been to Newport, where Mrs. Browne has had her residence for near y a year. He did not write to know how the child vas doing, and his apparent lack of interest gave the impression that he was willing to be estranged.

When he arrived and called to see the child has wife and her friends were somewhat surprised, as he offered no explanation of his long absence. As usual he was left alone with his little girl. An hour or so after his arrival a servant had occasion to enter the room. She found it empty, and at once told Mrs. Browne. The husband had taken the child in his arms and carried it to one of the harbor wharfs, where a sailboat awaited harbor wharfs, where a sailboat awaited for some was the sailboat awaited for some was the content of preach the Ges el. Then he down and wait for the coming of the day, and it will come before sleep comes, or your sleep will be a worried quies ence, and if you take the precaution to he flat on your back a frightful nightmare. Why not put a bound to your animosity? Why let your foes come into the sanctities of your derunitory? Why let those slanderers who have already torn your reputation to pieces or injured your business, bend over your midnight pillow and drive from you one of the greatest blessings that God can offer—sweet, refreshing, all invigoraling sleep? Why not fence out your enemies by the golden bars of the sunset? Why not stand behind the barricade of evening cloud and say to them: "Thus far and no farther!"

beh nd the barricade of evening cloud and say to them; "Thus far and no farther!" Many a man and many a woman is having the heat th of body as well as the heath of soul eaten away by a malevolent spirit it have in time of religious awakening had persons night after night come into the inquiry room and get no peace of soul. After a while I have himily asked her: "Is there are helded that you are not willing to give up?" After a little contusion she has slightly whispered: "Ves." Then I said to her: "Store while I have find the contusion she has slightly whispered: "Ves." The Cod as long as your tain that cost, and, though the fox was grawing his vital; he submitted to it rather than ex cosh as miscled. Many a man with a smilling face has under his cost, and, though the fox was grawing his vital; he submitted to it rather than ex cosh as miscled. Many a man with a smilling face has under his cost, and the price of the contusion and parents and children apart. Solomon says a brother offended is harder to be won that a strong city. Are there not enough secretary that the put the ashes into four sacks, and then put the ashes into four sacks, and the mour of suncown makes in the word ashes. The hour of suncown makes into the farming no practical suggestion. Thomas Carly's, in his biography of Frederick he Great says the old king was told by the confessor, said: "Her majesty had better write him immediately." Great; says the old king was told by the confessor he must be at peace with his enemies if he wanted to enter heaven. Then he said to his wife, the Queen: "Write to your brother after I am dead that I forgive him." Roloff, the confessor, said: "Her majesty had better immed ately." "No. King, "after I am dead; that will be safer." So he let the sun of his earthly existence go down upon his wrath. Again: We ought not to allow the sun to set before forgiveness takes place, because we might not live to see another day. And what if we should be usbered into the presence of our Maker with a grudge upon our soul? The majority of people depart this life in the aight. Between 11 o'clock p. m. and 3 o'clock a m. there is something in the atmosphere which relaxes the grip which the body has on the soil, and most people enter the next world through the sladows of this world. world through the sladows of this world. Perhaps God may have arranged it in that way so as to make the contrast the more glorious. I have seen simshiny days in this world that must have been almost like the radiance of heaven. But as most people leave the earth between sundown and suarise, they quit this world at its darkest, and heaven, always bright, will be the brighter for that contrast. Out of blackness into irradiation. Shall we then leap over the roseate bank of sunset into the favorite hunting ground of disease and death, carrying our animosities with us? Who would want to confront his God, against whom we have all done meaner things than anybody has ever done against us, carrying old grudges? How can we expect his forgive-grudges! How can we expect his forgiveness for the greater when we are not willing to forgive others the less? not willing to forgive others the less? Napoleon was encouraged to undertake the crossing of the Alps becaus: Carlemagne had previously crossed them. And all this rugged path of forgiveness bears the bleeding footsteps of him who conquered through suffering, and we ought to be willing to follow. On the night of our departure from this life into the next, our one plea will have to be offered in the presence of him who has said: "If you forgive not men their trespasses seither will your heavenly Father forgive your trespasses." What a sorry plight we stand there bating this one, and hating that one, and wishing this one a damage and that one, and wishing this one a damage and that one, and wishing this one a damage and some one else a calamity, and we ourselves needing forgiveness for ten thousand times ten thousand obliquities of heart and life. When our last hour comes, we want it to find us all right. Hardly anything affects me so much in the uncovering of ancient Pompell as the account of the soldier who, after the city had for more received with the for many centuries been covered with the sales and scorize of Vesuvius, was found standing in his place on guard, hand on spear and hemlet on head. Others fled at the awful submergement, but the explorer, 1,700 years after, found the body of that brave fellow in right position. And it will be a grand thing because of my unforgiving spirit, be denie divine forgiveness.

"But," says some woman, "there is a horrid creature that has so injured me that rather than make up with her I would die first."

Well, sister, you may take your choice—for one or the other it will be—your complete pardon of her or God's eternal banishment of you. "But," says some man "that fellow who cheated me out of those goods, or damaged my business credit, or started the lie about me in the newspapers, or by his perfidy broke up my domestic happiness, forgive him I cannot—forgive him I will not." Well, brother, take your choice. You will never be at peace with God till you are at peace with man. Feeling as you now do, you would not get so near the harbor of heaven as to see the lightship. Better leave that man with the God who said: "Vengeance is mine, I will repay."

said: "Vengeance is mine, I will repay." You may say: "I will make him sweat for that yet, I will make him squirm, I mean to pursue him to the death," but you are damaging yourself more than you damage him and you are making heaven for your owr soul an impossibility. If he will not be reconciled to you, be reconciled to him. In five or six hours it will be sundown. The lahlias will soon bloom against the western sky. Somewhere between this and that take a who has been your chief joy in life. You never speak of that place but with a smile. Some of you have pleasant memories connected with the evening star, or the moon in its first quarter, or with the sunrise, because you saw it just as you were arriving at havbor after a tempestious voyage. Forever and forever, O hearer, associate the sunset with your magnanimous, out and out, unlimited renunciation of all hatreds and forgiveness of all foes. I admit it is the most difficult of all graces to practice, and at the start you may make a complete failure, but keep on in the attempt to practice it. Shakespears wrote ten plays before he reached "Hamlet," and seventeen plays I efore he reached "Merchant of Venice," and twenty-eight plays before he reach "Macheth". And gradually you will come from the easier graces to the most difficult. Beside that, it is not a matter of personal determination so much as the laying hold of the alimighty arm of Gol, who will help us to do anything we ought to do. Remember that in all personal controversies the outlesst to blame will have to take the first step at preification, if it is ever affective. The contest between Meschines.

sunset than any mere lover of nature ever be-held; that is, by flinging into it all your fire trample them, and the charjots of fire roll over them, and the spearmen of fire stab them, and the breath of fire consume them, and the billows of fire overwhelm them. The sublimest thing God does is the sunset. The sublimest thing you can do is forgiveness. Along the glowing banks of this coming eventide let the divine and the uman be concurrent. Again: We should not let the sun go down on our wrath because it is of little importance what the world says of you or does to you when you have the affluent God of the sunser as your provider and defender. People talk as though it were a fixed spectacle of nature and always the same. But no one ever saw two sunsets alike, and if the world has existed 6,000 years there have been about 2,100,000 sunsets, each of them as distinct from all the other pictures in the gallery of the sky as Titian's 'Last Supne gattery of the sky as Titian's "Last Sup-per," Rubens' "Descent from the Cross," Raphael's "Transfiguration' and Michael Angelo's "Last Judgment" are distinct from each other. If that God, of such infinite resources that he can put on the wall of the sky each night more than the Louvre, and the Luxembourg, and the Vatican, and the Dresden and Venetian galleries all in one, is my Go1 and your God, our provider and protector, what is the use of our worry-ing about any human antagonism? If we are misinterpreted, the God of the many colored sunset can put the right color on our action. In he can afford to hang such masterpie: es over the outside wall of heaven and have hem obliterated in an hour, he must be very rich in resources and can put us through in safety. If all the garniture of the western heavens at eventide is but the upholstery of one of the windows of our future home, what small business for us to be chasing enemies. Let not this Sabbath sun go down upon your Mahomest said: "The sword is the key of Heaven and hell, a drop of blood shed is better than fasting, and wounds in the day of judgment resp endent as vermilion and odoriferous as musk." But, my hearers, in the last day we will find just the opposite of that to be true, and that the sword never unlast the said of the sword never unlast the said of the locks he iven, and that he who hea's wounds is greater than he who makes them, and that on the same ring are two keys: God's for on the same ring are two keys: God's for giveness of us and our forgiveness of enemies; and these two keys unlock Paradise.

And now I wish for all of you a beautiful sunset in your earthly existence. With some of you it has been a long day of trouble, and with others of you it will be far from calm. When the sun rose at 6 o'clock it was the morning of youth, and a fair day was prophesied, but by the time the noonday of mid-life had come and the clock of your earthly existence had struck 12 cloud racks gathered and tempest bellowed in the track of tempest. But as the evening of old age approaches I pray God the skies may brighten and the clouds be piled up into pillars as of celestial temples to which you go, or move as with mounted cohorts come to take you home. And as you sink out of sight beyou home. And as you sink out of sight be-lew the horizon may there be a radiance of Christian example lingering long after you are gone, and on the heavens be written in letters of sapphire, and on the waters in letters of opal, and on the hills in letters of emerald: "Thy sun shall no more go down, neither shall thy moon withdraw itself, for the Lord shall be thy everlasting light and the days of thy mourning shall be ended." the days of thy mourning shall be ended." So shall the sunset of earth become the sun-

SYRACUSE HAS A BIG FIRE

Three Large Establishments Go and a Theatre Audience Frightened-Loss $400,000.

The largest fire that Syracuse, N. Y., has experienced for ten years occurred, when three of its largest business firms were burned out; besides many smaller ones; Loss, $400,-000, about half covered by insurance. The buildings burned were on South Salina street during the night until they were safely out between Walter and Railroad streets. The rear of the buildings jutted against the Wieting Opera-House, which was filled with people to see Joe Emmit. A panic was only prevented by the coolness of Mr. Emmet and Manager Lehnan, who assured the people that there was no immediate danger. The house was soon cleared, but not before

The banditti learned that the officers were on their trail, and they skipped out in a northwesterly direction through the sandbill and canyons of Northwestern Nebraska, with the officers came upon the thieves, who had taken shelter with a settler who lives in a dug-out. They were sleeping on their blankets by their borses in a stable. When surrounded they soon realized the situation and determined to die rather than be taken alive. They mounted their horses and made a terrife rush for liberty, amid a volley of bulletts from the posse.

The thieves kept up a steady fire at the officers. Smith's horse was shot from under him and he received several bullett wounds, any one of which would prove fatal. Strohl, at full speed, plunged his horse into a ravine twenty feet deep and was almost instantly; killed.

Taylors borse was shot from under him and he gave himself up. One of the officers received a flesh wound in the arm. There are several others connected with this band of outlaws whom the officers think they will apprehend soon.

The house was soon cleared, but not before the walls near the stage were very hot.

A REVOLT OF THE K. OF L.

Knights Opposed to the Minneapolis Proceedings Declare Their Independence.

The dissenters from the action taken at the Minneapolis convention have declared open war with the executive board of the Kights of Labor, and have issued their declaration of independence. On returning from the convention about thirty-five delegates, representing fifteen states, stopped in Chicago and determined to bring about a reorganization of the order. They elected a provisional committee, five members, of which Charles F. Seib was made secretary. A long communication was drafted at Secretary Seib's office and forwarded in circular form to the Knights of Labor all over this country. It declares that it is "Our duty to reorganize" the Order of the Knights of Labor on a basis which will secure the autonomy of the trades and the sovereignty of the districts in all pertaining to their trade and local affairs, and to prevent it from being used in the future as a machine to fill the coffers of defuture as a machine to fill the coffers of designing and unscrupulous men, as it is by those now in power. We affir a the following to be the reasons that have compelled this serious action on our part: The general office has become a luxurious haunt for men whose chief aim is to benefit self, pecuniarily, and otherwise, and is no longer the Jerusalem of the humble and honest Knight. There has been for more than a year, beginning prior to the Richmond session, an understanding, which, for lack of a better word, we will call a conspiracy, for the purpose of holding the salaried positions, elective and appointive, in and under the General Assembly. This conspiracy has used the secret channels and the funds of the order to manufacture sentiment for certain members and against others. Certain persons, somemanuficture sentiment for certain members and against others. Certain persons, sometimes called 'general lecturers,' 'general organizers,' 'general instructors' and general many other things, have been paid extravagant sums, both as wages and expenses, when their chief work was to 'fix' certain districts. The lobbyists of railroad corporations would time green with envy did they know the superlative excellence attained by these bloodsuckers of the Knights of Labor. District and local assemblies have been sus-D strict and local assemblies have been suspended or expelled and deprived of a voice in the General Assembly because they were known as opponents to the policy of the conspirators. The records of the General Assembly have been fixed and doctored so as to see the constitution of the co General Assembly representatives. Many thousands of dollars of the order's funds have been illegally expended. Extravagant hotel oills contracted by the familie officers have been paid out of the order's funds, as have family laundry and bar bills Funds have been douated and loaned to officers and their families and friends for their own personal use. The boycott has been used to injure the labor pr ss, union es-tablishments and the products of Knights of Labor and union labor for the sole purpose of 'downing' workingmen and women who could not be used by the conspirators. In spite of the decrease of membership, they have increased the annual expenditures of the general officers to half a million dollars. There is no itemized account or receipts to expenditures issued either quarterly, as had formerly been the custom, or to the General

HURLED TO DEATH.

Two Sisters Killed by a Fast Express

When the engine of the fast express of the Pennsylvania Railroad thundered into the d pot at Lancaster, Pa., the pilot was spattered with blood. Shortly before the train was due, and when Rank's station, eight miles away had been reached, the engineer miles away had been reached, the engineer saw a white covered farmer's wagon ahead. A freight train had just passed, and the wagon having stopped for it, proceeded to cross, the occupants not hearing the fast express on account of the noise of the freight. The whistle was sounded, the air brakes were promptly applied, but in an instant the train was at the crossing, the engine struck the wagon and horse and hurled them high in the air.

The forms of two women were hurled down an embankment, where their mangled bodies an embankment, where their mangled bodies were found. They were s sters, married to brothers, and their names were Mrs. Jacob Stoltzfus, of Leacock township, and Mrs. Barbara Stoltzfus, who was visiting from Kans s. They are middle aged ladies, and stand high in the peculiar religious sect to which they belong. They were returning home in the wagon from the city.

—Mrs. Stoltzfus was hurl d fifty yards and killed instantly. Her sister died in a few minutes after being picked up.

POLITICS IN A CONVENT.

Quarrel Among Nuns Over the Election of a Mother Superior.

Convent politics have kicked up a row among the French nuns who labor among the fashionable catholics of Pittsburg. The difficulty is in the Ursuline Convent, which was recently erected for $250,000 in the stylish quarter of the town. The order had its origin in France, and in

The order had its origin in France, and in the convent here a question has arisen between the French and American element. They have heretofore been operated under the old French constitution, in which no direct provisions are made for elections. But it has been a rule of the order that no sister can be elected as Mother Superior for more than two terms of two years each.

Sister Alphonse came here seventeen years ago, and was elected Mother Superior, and ever since ens always been re-elected to that position. At the recent election there was a regular row, the nuns rebelled against the election, and the matter was referred to the Bishop, His decision was not satisfactory to all concerned.
