

Moroccan bandit furnishes the latest example of the romatic vicissitudes of Old Masters, many of which are at least as strange as fiction.

If pictures had tongues what curious stories of wandering and adventures some of them could tell! Take for instance that magnificent picture of Titian, a canvas 16 feet long and 7 feet high, representing the entombment of Christ, which was lost for centures only to come to light in a church in the heart of Mexico; or that portrait of Nell Gwynn, by Sir Peter Lely, which was discovered not long ago by a doctor in a Birmingham, *England, slum.

Take, too Raphael's famous "Massacre of the Innocent," which was found, after generations of disappear ance, in the cottage of a poor widow at Como, Italy. Piece by piece it was possible, with much difficulty, to reconstruct some of the history of this treasure of art, and a strange story it is. At one time it belonged to the celebrated Cardinal Yppolito d'Este, Ariosto's patron, from whose hands eit passed into those of another Cardi nal, Luigi d'Este. At his death a priest Reggio became its owner for the ridiculous sum of a sovereign; and the, afer refusing thrice this sum for it, presented it to the Duke Alfonzo d'Este, who in turn gave it to the Princess Margherita Gonzaga, his niece. when the Princess died, the picture passed to the Duke of Urbino, and from that stage of its history nothing more was heard of it until 1658, when the Duke d'Este employed a Francismonk to find it at any cost. For five years the monk sought everywhere in vain, and at the end of the time he reported to the Duke that, "after having traveled all over Italy on his quest and employing every means both spiritual and materrial, he was forced to abandon the hopeless task." And now, two and a half centuries later, the long-lost picture has come thus strangely to light.

Greensboro, Aug. 27 .- An amusing, while at the same time serious form The of "graft" that is worked here between negro men and women, and probably worked everywhere else , makes the "house servant problem' still harder of solution. Everybody knows, that when a housewife gets out of a cook, a maid or a nurse, the man of the family, no less than the lady, is over anxious to supply the vacum, however vaca-uous the substitution ' may be. The first thing the man does when he comes down town, is to run across some of his "good darkey friends," tell him his difficulty, tip him with a dollar or fitty cents and command him to look him up a cook or a maid or a nurse as the case may be. A new servant invariably turns up in a few hurs. Receiving pay on Saturday for a week or possibly only two day's work, the family wakes up to new trouble Sunday morning without the new servant, and without possible rea son for an dissatisfaction on her part, expressed or implied during her short ervice. It has been discovered that the trou ble lies in the fact that the servant has been sent to another place by the good darkey friend, who has had his dollar or fifty cents tip, and accom modatingly earned it, and makes five or six dollars a week out of the shrewd negro knowledge of white folk's ways A gentleman here who spent six dollars in as many weeks in such tips for servants to one of his trusted "old timey negro men friends,". says that he finally caught on to the racket by losing a cook to a neighbor across the street, who had tipped the same old fellow five times in less than two months.
