Lesson IX.—Second Quarter,

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, John xx, 1-18.
Memory Verses, 15, 16—Golden Text, Rev. 1-18—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

(Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.)

We should certainly be grateful for three resurrection lessons in succession, but even thirty such would do us no good if we do not see ourselves as crucified with Him and risen with Him and our life laid with Christ to God, that so our affections may be set on things above and our hearts upon the appearing with Him in glory (Col. iii, 1-4). The more fully we are grasped by the great truth of His resurrection the more earnestly will we pray the prayer "that I may know Him and the power of His resurrection" (Phil. iii, 10, 11), for unless our reception of Him as the one crucified and risen for us and our intimate acquaintance with Him as the ascended Christ, our great High Priest, lead to a reproduction of His life in us He is not having the right of way in our lives, as He desires to have. As His whole life was covered by the one word "submission," so must ours be. "Submit to God. Resist the devil."

That there is no salvation, no forgiveness of sins, no gospel to preach, if Christ be not risen is fully set forth in I Cor. xv. The emphasis given to it by the apostles in their preaching is seen in such passages as Acts ii, 24, 32; iii, 15, 26; iv, 10; v, 30; xii, 23, 33, etc. At His death the sun was darkened, the earth did quake, the rocks rent, the graves were opened, and all nature seemed to groan in abhorrence of such a deed; but, as we saw in the last lesson, the hardened heart of sinful man could scoff at and deride Him who was suffering for the sins of those very men. He died, the just for the unjust. His body was laid in Joseph's new tomb by the kind hands of two secret disciples, who in that hour of emergency became bold for Him. His enemies remembered that He had said that He would rise again the third day, and so with Pilate's approval they made the tomb as sure as they could, sealing the stone and setting a watch (Matt. xxvii, 62-66). To mere human eyes it looked as if the devil had the victory and the impostor, as the scribes and Pharisees thought, had been finally disposed of. But at all men's thoughts and purposes "He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh; the Lord shall have them in derision" (Ps. li, 4).

At the appointed time on the third day He came forth victorious over sin and death and the grave, and He showed Himself alive by many infallible proofs during forty days, speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God (Acts i, 3). There is no topic more plain in Scripture and yet less understood by preachers generally and, of course, by the majority who listen to them than the kingdom of God or of heaven, which our Lord Himself described as the will of God done on earth as in heaven. It is described as including all the nations upon earth, all kings bowing down to Jesus as King of kings and all the nations worshipping Him as the Messiah of Israel, they having become a righteous nation at His appearing in glory and all nations blessed through them. Then we who now accept Him and serve Him and follow Him shall in our resurrection bodies reign with Him in His kingdom. Inasmuch as our mortal bodies shall be made like unto His glorious body, for we shall be like Him (Phil. iii, 21; I John iii, 2), it becomes to us a matter of the greatest possible interest to note the powers and the nature of His resurrection body. Our special lesson to day, although it mentions only one of His appearances, really covers four—that to Mary Magdalene, to the other women, to Simon Peter and to the two who walked to Emmaus. We have called attention to the fact of there being no redemption apart from His resurrection, but redemption will be found to include our bodies also at the resurrection of the just (I Cor. xv, 51). Although He forbade Mary to touch Him because, as He said, He was then on His way to His Father in His risen body, He allowed the other women to hold Him by the feet and to worship Him (Matt. xxviii, 9); therefore the resurrection body was a real, tangible, material body, as we shall see more fully in the two succeeding lessons. We gather nothing of the nature of that body from His appearing to Peter, for we have only the record of the fact (Luke xxiv, 34), but from His appearance to the two who walked to Emmaus we learn that He walked as they did and sat at meat with them in the house and took bread and blessed and brake it. Then He did something which they in their mortal bodies could not do—He vanished out of their sight. This we shall also be able to do when we have bodies like His.

One prominent truth in connection with His resurrection talks is that we grieve Him greatly when we fail to believe what is written concerning Him. The angels said to the women, "He is risen, as He said," and He Himself told the two men on the way to Emmaus that they were foolish not to believe all that the prophets had written of Him, which things He expounded unto them. It is written in our lesson concerning Peter and John that they knew not the Scripture concerning His resurrection (verse 9).

Good Digestion.

Blest is the man whose stomach power Digests bread made of meal or flower

And every kind of food Whose cook can bake, fry or boil Whether at rest, play or toil This appetite is good.

Of vegetables he eats his fill Like running sausage through a mill

Just anything you please Consumes all trash that he may find

Of every name and every kind, Digesting all with ease.

Ham; eggs, cheese and cod fish balls

Just anything for which he calls Soupe meat and liver stake Boloney sausage by the pound He gulps it all in like a hound And has no stomach ache.

Celery, peas and cantelope Green corn, beans and tomato soup

Salids and tater slaugh Ice cream, ice tea, and chocolate He dumps in pound cake by the plate

In his capacious mouth.
Mark well this man his life is bliss

The girls would all give him a kiss
If they had a good chance.

His rudy beaming cheerful face So much admired in every place With radiant countenance.

Not so with him that can't digest He is a failure at his best With sallow stringy neck

With whuzzing voice he tries to talk Uncertain, nervous shambling walk

Physically a wreck.

When the baby is cross and has you worried and worn out you will find that a little Cascasweet the well known remedy for babies and children, will quiet the little one in a short time. The ingredients are printed plainly on the bottle. Contains no opiates. Sold by C.
M. Shuford & W. S. Martin.

Prosperity.

This is the season when those estimating the prospects of prosperity may be said to have their hand on the pulse of our nation.
Those sections of the country where the great crops are raised, are closely watched at this season of the year. The reports from these sections, so far, are indeed encouraging.

Kansas and Missouri have sent out glowing reports of the wheat crops in that section. The insects, sometimes so destructive, have not made their appearance this year and rain has been abundant.

Nebraska's wheat crop is enormously large. Minnesota, the Dakotas and Iowa send out optimistic reports. The crops of Oklahoma and Texas are in excelent condition and the Southwest and Northwest have a favorable outlook.

These things are encouraging because hardtimes must be accompanied or preceeded by depressing conditions in the regions from which the world's supply of food comes and a bountiful crop in these regions is the surest sign of future prosperity.

BAD ATTACK OF DYVENTERY CURED.

"An honored citizen of this town was suffering from a severe attack of dysentery. He told a friend if he could obtain a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, he felt confident of being cured, he having used this remedy in the West. He was told that I kept it in stock and lost no time in obtaining it and was promptly cured,"

Mark Twain On Money.

In a speech at a dinner in New York, Mark Twain said that the recent financial panic was caused by the removal from the coinage of the motto, "In God we Trust," Mark, afterwards, of course corrected this by saying, "Of course I am joking." The panic was caused by a wrong idea of the use and value of money. That is the cause of all money troubles.

The spend-thrift says, money being round, was made to roll.
The miser says that, being flat, it was made to stack up. Both are wrong. Strangely wrong, too, in their ideas about money are the veteran Australian gold diggers. These simple old fellows, though worth perhaps a half million or more, live in the simple dugouts and shanties of their earlier days.

They have no conception of the value for their money they could get in the way of motor cars, diamonds or opera boxes.
Their conception of luxury is a trip to town, a silk dress for the wife and maybe a whiskey spree.

"Once lecturing, I landed at an Australian port. There was no porter in sight to carry my luggage. Seeing a rough-looking fellow leaning against a post with his hands in his pockets, I beckoned to him and said: "See here, if you'll carry these bags up to the hotel, I'll give you half a crown. The man scowled at me. He took three or four gold sovereigns from his pocket, threw them into the sea, scowled at me again and walked away without a word."

Never can tell when you'll mash a finger or suffer a cut, bruise, burn or scald. Be prepared. Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil instantly relieves the pain

One Clever Lad.

There was once a prince whose father was a famous general and king over a very large province.
At one time the king made war against another king, and having defeated his army, captured his kingdom and added it to his own. To the boy prince this seemed very discouraging for he was sure his father would capture all kingdoms in the world and there would be none left for him when he grew up to be a king. Today the prince's mistake seems amusing, for we know he had no conception of the real size of the world.

Now, it happens that even today there are young people who make the same mistake in thinking that all the great things that are worth doing have been done; all the great discoveries made; all the strange countries have been visited; all the grand inventions finished, and all that is worth finding out has already been printed in books. Let us see what one young man has done. There is, in one of the great scientific schools, a student who, when fifteen years old, began the study of a new science called wireless telegraphy. Man learned and able men, both here and in Europe had studied the laws of Nature that govern the mysterious waves that in wireless telegraphy seem to fly from ship to ship or from shore to shore over land and sea. They had invented curious machines where with they could send telegraphic messages from place to place without wire.

Walter J. Willenborg learned of all that had been done in this new science, yet he did not sit down idle and discouraged. He decided to try to learn in his own way, at his home all that was known, and then he would try to learn more.

Fortunately, Walter's father saw that his son was in earnest, and he fitted up for him a little room adjoining his bedroom as a laboratory and a work shop, and Walter began his work bright and early in the morning and saw his books, tools and papers the last thing at night. Before long he began to plan a wireless telegraphic station in his own work shop at the top of the house. These things were to be of his own invention, though, of course based upon some of those already in use. In time, he learned to be a master operator with apparatus used in the new science Curious to see what could be done on a very small scale, he these juices that the food we eat is acted upon in such a way as to produce the rich, red blood that flows through the veins of our body and thereby makes us strong, healthy and robust, and it is the weakening of these digestive juices that destroys health.

It is our own fault if we destroy our own health, and yet it is so easy for anyone to put the stomach out of invented and made a portable wireless telegraphic station that he could carry about in his pocket.

From the top button of his coat he hung a slender wire that reached the ground and so arranged that when he walked along the country road the wire would trail upon the ground behind him. In his pocket he carried a little battery. On a bit of board, as big as your hand, he placed a complete wireless transmitting apparatus, induction coil, baby sounder, and all, supporting this fairy telegraph station by fastening it to a belt around his waist. From this traveling station he sent messages from a country road to his folks at home eight miles away in town, telling them where was going, and that he would reach home in time for supper.—Ex.

A Strange Woman.

A very small unmarried woman weighing only three hundred pounds accompanied by her husband came into an upstairs room on the first floor of this office carrying an empty basket containing a pug-dog, a cat, and a parrot.
The woman (who by-the-way, was bareheaded) had on a merry widow hat worth one dollar, which she had bought at a greatly reduced price, having paid two dollars and a half for it. She was looking for her son who had disappeared the night before at seven in the morning. She stated that her son, a female about sixteen years old, went in the direction of Morganton, and at the speed he was going when last seen, he ought, by that time be in Statesville. Any one possessing information of the lost child will please report same by letter to this office in person.
