Why a Corporation Commission any-way? When the last legislature first dis-cussed the matter of creating a special commission to negotiate with the rail-road, terms of freight rate adjustment a great many of the people of the State were anxious to know the nec-essivol, or a reason why this should be done, in view of the fact that the Corporation Commission already had ampe authority to draw with such problems In fact the people already In fact the people already the booklet who would have given to to see results early in our lives and it mental branch and realizing that one the efforts of the people to correct weeds that disturb the growing fruit,

When, however, the legislature had adjourned and the railoads in their premature realization of two the source raid inmunity, began to laugh at the governor and the spe-cial commission, the people at large charged of the State believe that we oused an enthusiasm and spirit of resistance all over the State. It had given birth to a public sentiment which is oftentimes much stronger honor of North Carolina will become than any laws which we can place on the statute books: a public sentiment which the railroads would not dare to defy. At the height of this wave of entrusiasm which was moulding a new the railroads admit to be unjust. which the railroads would not dare to public opinion, we find the Corporation Commission suddenly ceasing its inactivities and through its chief clerk coming forward with the astounding proposition of a million dollar steamboat company—the only panacea for through the Just Freight Rate As-our freight rate troubles. Were it not sociation, a free hand in their efforts for making a grave problem seem ludicrous, we would be tempted to compare ar. Maxwell's proposition with some of the "cure all" patent medicines which we occasionally see on the "bill boards." Again why was this startling discovery made just at the time when the movement which the peope had started had gained such head ay that we were beginning to believe we could accomplish some good despite the mactivity of the Corporation Commission? If a lite of inertia was in the past so appealing to the commission, is it not a pity that it should have discovered just at this time that it was really created and pail to do work, and in the realization strictly at 11 30 a. m. of this fact it became so anxious to accomplish something, that it has ac-tually engaged in heading off a move-ment by the people to secure for them-selves a relief, which has always been selves a relief, which has always been selves a relief, which has always been the duty of the commission and one of the chief purposes for which it was created. If the railroads in the pasthave had the benefit of a policy of inactivity on the part of the commission it certainly seems that the State should receive equal consideration at the hands of its own servants.

There again if the "steamboat proposition" is the only medium through which the state will ever be able to obtain relief, would it not have been more in keeping with the dignity of the state for this proposition to have been submitted through the Corporation Commission or one of its members? Is Mr. Maxwell the only official connected with the commission who has taken enough interest in the matter to attempt to devise a plan by which we may be able to obtain relief? If this be true it is a sad reflection on the membership of the commission. If, however, the commission is really father to the plan, and wanted to give it a "try out" and see how it "took" with those who are really interested in the matter of freight rates, before it was willing to admit the fatherhood, then we deeply sympathize with Mr. Maxweil in his misfortune of having been made the mouthpiece and incidentally the "goat."

But regardless of who is the real fat er of the speech, Mr. Maxwell is supporting it as one of his own children, and the commission has a dopted it and attempted to lend it added dignity by making it an official publication. Since we know that somebody wrote the speech and that Mr. Maxwell delivered it, we now want to locate and identify the "third" person who is the author of the pre- night. feratory remarks that appear in the pamphiet form of the speech, now Mr. Unver w known as an official document.
