He was kind, liberal and generous, but rough, especially at times. I asked him what his roughness meant and he said: "Well, I can only say that I could not stand the mill hands when they came for money before pay day, but they get all they ask for and sometimes more."

He took great interest in this University and the records kept here by the trustees of this institution with his yearly visits here, and his sayings and doings while here, will stand to perpetual memory of some parts of his useful life.

He did not expect our system of free public instruction to cure all social disorders.

While recognizing free common schools as the settled policy of the State, he knew they were not a modern discovery.

His investigation and reading taught him that they obtained in the Roman Empire, and furnished most perhaps coincident with the striking decay of public and private virtue in that empire; that the instruction then administered and communicated in the public schools was relatively on a level with the instruction in public schools of today in the countries of continental Europe.

I take the responsibility of saying that the time has come when thoughtful men should hold up their heads and speak patiently, truthfully and with candor respecting these things, recognizing the good by our public schools, and in the same breath admonishing the people against unreasonable expectations of good from them. While mindful of the leading thoughts in the address of your accomplished and diligent president, pronounced recently in a distant State, I do not relinquish its stores, as it might be inferred, I sought to put upon him somewhat of my own opinions.

It is too much the fashion nowadays, to call for further tribute from the people who make buckle and tongue meet with difficulty to be expended in making these schools longer and more splendid. No mere intellectual training can ever make good citizens. There must be bodied forth in the mind, heart, soul and character of our youth the elemental virtues. These are the best taught by those who are responsible for their birth; and no temporary idol will take their stead in good ordered governments.

These lines from the only sonnet Benjamin Disraeli wrote draw the portrait of our subject, with close approach to life:

"No gusts of mind,
Fifal and wild, but that continued state,
Of ordered impulse mariners await
In some benignant and enriching wind."

On the first day of August, 1881, after much reflection and preparation, Mr. Steele joined the church and on the 16th day of October, the same year he died.

"The house is finished, the hearth is at the door."

Our duty would not be happily completed did we abandon this upright and virtuous life as the mortal remains descend into their narrow earth to wait, "unmolested by decay," the eternal day.

Tacitus, in the annals of Rome, pays an imperishable tribute to the character of Agricola. In his endeavor to comfort the bereaved family of this stately man, he exhorts them to cherish and imitate the "wisdom of his soul."

The Fluctuation of Jay Gould's Wealth.

Jay Gould's millions are subject to more ups and downs in the world than is the average lot of man. When he died he left stocks valued at $70,000,000. These securities increased in value rapidly until January 29th, when the Gould estate was worth in the market $12,000,000 more than when its creator died. But all that profit and several millions more besides have been wiped out by recent events in Wall Street. When the market closed on June 3rd, the Gould trust securities were worth $6,000,000 less than on the day that Jay Gould died. Even that was better than their condition a month ago. On May 5th the Gould block of Western Union, Manhattan, and Missouri Pacific was worth about $61,000,000 or $9,000,000 less than on December 4th when Mr. Gould died. The zigzag of the Gould millions in these few months makes an interesting study in big figures. Taking $70,000,000 as a basis, it is seen that the estate has touched as high as $82,000,000 and as low as a $61,000,000, a fluctuation of $21,000,000.—Morning Oregonian.

How to Take Life.

It's awfully tiresome to be a girl, said a miss of thirteen summers, as she fiddled up her work and put it carefully away in her basket. "It is nothing but 'Don't do this' and 'Don't do that' and 'Do this just so' and 'Do that the other way' from morning until night. I just got tired of living, indeed, I do!" and two big tears fell upon her hands as silent penitential marks in her conversation.

"My dear child," said her teacher, "did you ever read about the training of Victoria, Queen of Great Britain? She was likely to be a queen some day, and this her mother knew. The Duchess of Kent was one of the wisest of women, and from the time little Victoria was a toy girl her entire training was to one purpose, that she might worthily rule a great nation. When she was old enough to understand about such things, her possible responsibilities were explained to her, and when she sighed and complained, as she sometimes did, it was only necessary to remind her that some day she might be queen, and how would an ignorant, careless queen manage the affairs of such an intelligent cultured people.

"Now I do not suppose that you are likely to be a queen in any such sense as Victoria is, but you are, if you live, to be the queen of a beautiful realm called home, and every day's lessons well learned will make you more and more fit for your responsibilities and duties. Life is a very earnest thing, a very solemn thing, if you look at it in its great depth and comprehensiveness. I don't mean that you should be solemn yourself, or feel called upon to go about burdened with the weight of the world's woes and sorrows. You know the Bible says that 'A merry heart doeth good like a medicine.' Learn to be cheerful and bright and sunny. Be helpful and hopeful, good-natured and obliging. It makes good friends and keeps them, and that is one of the most important things in life. Try to learn something useful every day and hour, even when you are amusing yourself. It comes easy after a while, as great ones. There is an old and very true saying that trifles make up the sum of life, and little things make or mar the harmony of every-day affairs."—New York Ledger.

All About a Nose.

They have had a funny church row in an Ohio town and all about the shape of a woman's nose. The quarrel originated last Christmas about the purchase of candy for the Sunday school entertainment, one of the ladies who had been appointed a member of the committee for that purpose showing herself so domineering as to call forth some sharp criticism. One of the critics discussing the matter declared that the trouble arose because the lady in question was "too smart," whereupon a would-be male remarked that "he knew that from the shape of her nose," at which all the ladies laughed with great zest, at the same time casting admiring glances in the mirror at their own more orthodox noses. From this pleasant bit of religious gossip a feud arose to which ordinary choir feuds are as nothing. The lady whose nose had been insulted was personally informed of what had been said about it, and she immediately bearded the slanders in his own house and demanded a retraction. With the cowardice that characterizes the average man when confronted by an indignant woman, he hid, figurative speaking, behind his wife's petticoats and persuaded her to tell the lady with the heretical nose that he had not said anything derogatory to her ofactory organ. She was not to be pacified in this way, however, but went back to the person who had told her and had the story confirmed with all the barrowing circumstance and detail which one woman so well knows how to throw into a narration of this sort about nothing. The wife of the slanderer still persisting in her denial in order to shield her guilty and trembling husband, the lady whose nose had been so shamefully maligned brought an ecclesiastical suit against the violator and his wife, charging them with being guilty of falsehood in denying the accusation, and of hatred, malice and all uncharitableness in the original nasal insinuation. Lawyers were engaged on both sides and the case was heard before a jury of five church members, with the pastor sitting as the judge. Many witnesses, principally the members of the female persuasion, were examined and testified with great volubility and delight, bringing in so much extraneous matter and traveling so far and so frequently out of the case to make little flings at other female members that there was great danger at times that the proceedings would degenerate into an active exchange of compliments in the way of hair pulling and scratching. It took great tact on the part of the pastor and jurymen to soothe the excited feelings of the sisters, but finally they brought in a verdict which served to calm the storm. They found that the defendants were not guilty of falsehood and had never reflected in any way upon the plaintiff's nose, and they found further that the nose which was at issue in the case was a good, orthodox, Christian nose, indicative only of such virtues as humility, patience, long suffering, faith, hope, and charity, and not in the remotest degree suggestive of pride, arrogance or a detestable character. The verdict pleased all sides, the women kissed, wept and made up, and the nose that had threatened to disrupt a whole congregation and destroy the friendships of a lifetime retired to the shades of a domestic life vindicated, happy and at peace with all the world. The moral of this story would seem to be; in the first place, never speak ill of a woman's nose; but in the second place, if you do, deny it, and stick to your denial; and in the third place, if the case comes to be adjudicated in the church, let the pastor and his jurymen imitate the diplomatic course of the Ohio tribunal and bring in a verdict that will heal the lacerated feelings of the ladies and convert a threatened schism into a general love-feast.—Baltimore Sun

A Woman's Heart Burst Asunder.

BURLINGTON, Ia., June 28.—The suddenness of the death of Mrs. Gus Walden, who was apparently in perfect health, was so strange that a post mortem examination was held. Her heart was found burst asunder. Physicians say no other such case was ever heard of. The case is supposed to "have been a tremendous emotional convulsion."

The World's Fair and American Railways.

The Queen and Crescent Route widely known as the route running the "Finest Trains in the South," is in the field to carry everybody from the South to the World's Fair at Chicago. No part of the Southern country is left unacared for by this great railway and its connections. The Through Car system is an admirable exposition of the wonderful capabilities of American railroading. From New Orleans Through Sleeping cars run daily, morning and evening, carrying its passengers via Cincinnati at Louisville, as they may select. From Shreveport, Vicksburg and Jackson another Through Sleeping Car Line comes to join and become a part of the magnificent Vestibled Through trains, which passed through Birmingham and the famous Wills Village of Alabama, is joined at Chattanooga by the train from Jacksonville, Florida, Brunswick and Atlanta, Ga., over the E. T. V. & G. Ry., and proceeds north over the beautiful Cincinnati Southern, through the grandest natural scenery and most attractive historical country in the world, to Ocala, where another magnificent Pullman car is received, coming from the Richmond & Danville System, the beautiful French Broad country and Asheville, N. C., and Knoxville, Tenn.

The time to Chicago is made so as to afford the most convenient hours for the departures from the principal cities, and arrivals in Chicago.

Passengers can purchase tickets a good over one hundred of the River, and returning via another if they desire a variable route without extra charge. Or they can go via Cincinnati, returning via Louisville, or vice versa.

Round trip tickets on sale at reduced rates. Agents of the Chicago line will on request assist in looking up rooms or accommodation for visitors to the Fair.

Everything that an almost perfect system can devise to deserve the praise and patronage of the traveling public has been provided. Any of the agents of the company named below, will cheerfully give all possible information and assistance. R. H. GARRETT, New Orleans, La.; I. HARRY, Vicksburg, Miss.; J. R. You need a MAGAZINE in your family. Get one that gives the best satisfaction for the money.

Godey's will save you in "Dress Hints" ten times its cost in one year.

Godey's will give you a better idea of how to dress and what materials to use than any similar publication.

Godey's will continue the Children's Corner, which has been so favorably received and enjoyed by our younger readers.

Godey's will give you in fact the best of everything within its covers. Including: Literature, Dramas, Music, Engravings, Dress hints, Home Talks, Etiquette, etc., etc.

With the January issue we will begin two new serials entitled:

The Discipline of Pain.
By EDGAR FAWCETT.

A story of New York life, written in his best vein and manner. His national reputation is at any time a guarantee of an interesting novelette.

Marjorie Lee.
By MARGARET SPENCER.

Whose bright and attractive letters from Washington have met with so much favor from our readers. The story is located in the Capital, and as the author herself resides there it is full of real incidents. We predict for "Marjorie Lee" a warm reception from our subscribers, who will be sure to find her very winsome, and feel that the authoress has worked for them a fair web that has many beauties and few imperfections.

For the latter months we have a number of Serials and Short Stories by the best authors.

The Legend of the Lanterns, by Mrs. Olivia Lovell Wilson. This charming story will run through several numbers, and will be illustrated with original photographs by Will Philip Hooper.

The Autobiography of Mary, by Adm. Marie Peck. To those who have read "The Filian Mystery," by this author, we need say nothing except that it is thought to be better (if possible) than any of her previous efforts.

In addition to our usual number of Short Stories, we shall publish a series of articles entitled "Advice from Everywhere," by Olivia Phillips. Embracing such subjects as the sick room, home nursery, children's nursery, amusements for the shut-ins, a minister's outing, a year well spent, etc.

TOTAL. Godey furnishes during the year over 1000 pages of interesting, entertaining, useful, home matter, desirable and instructive to every lady in the land.

NOTICE. Any person desiring to raise a Club should send for our circular to club raisers. We pay large cash commissions or beautiful and costly premiums.
