VINDICATION OF SIMMONS.

Make the Work Complete

In an interview published after the national Democratic platform was framed but before it was adopted by the Baltimore convention Senator Simwith it as a deciaration of Democratic principles and purposes. And no wonder he is pleased with it. A careful General Carrs gift was simply that study will show it is as much a vindi-

> For months before the State convention was held it was known that Senator Simmons opponents were tion against him. They said, "Wait until that convention acts and Senator Simmons will hear something drop." But the State convention not only endorsed his record by a decisive majority and "heartily," it adopted a platform with a tariff declaration in line with his contention for a tariff against a tariff of any kind which seeks to put the things our people sell on the free list while providing for protection on things they buy; thus endorsing the Senator's whole creed and contention on the tariff question.

After this endosement by the State convention the senator's opponents said: "Wait until the national convention meets and makes its declaration on lumber and reciprocity." Well the reciprocity was mentioned in it. So. is this not a clear vindication of the Senator's position upon these quesplatform declaration with reference to lumber meant that if the Democrats controlled they would make a tariff bill putting lumber and trust-controlled because God Almighty should get at products on the free list and reducing the tariff on all dutiable articles to a revenue basis, and that it did not mean that lumber was to be put on the free list while trust-controlled products were protected and tariff duties on other products were unchanged. The State executive committee and a large agreed with Sepator Simmons that this was the correct interpretation of the platform; but his opponents contended otherwise.

The Senator also contended that there was no reason why raw materials should be put on the free list while the products manufactured out of them. remained on the protected list. This position was attacked by his orponents and it was claimed that the national platform would declare for free raw materials. The tailure of the national convention to make, in connection with the tariff, any reference to raw materials or any specific articles is conclusive evidence that as a result of the controversy which has been waged over lumber and free raw materials. and against putting the products of one section on the free list and those of another on the dutiable list, that great Democratic body reached the conclusion that the only just tariff is one which applies the principles of a tariff for revenue equally to the products of all sections, all classes and occupations, without discrimination against any; and that in levying tariff taxation the great fundamental Democratic principle of equality should be observed and maintained. So the convention saidand that is in the line of Senator Simmons contention-that if it was entrusted with power it would reduce taxes gradually to a revenue basis; and added: "We recognize that our system of taxation is intimately connected with the business of the country and we favor the ultimate attainment of the principle we advocate by legislation that will not injure or destroy legitimate industry." This omission of any reference to free raw materials or to lumber, in view of the agitation throughout the country upon these questions, is deliberate and intenional, and as such must be taken as a party declaration not only that the party has no criticism to make of those who have taken the position of Senator Simmons upon these questions, but that it recognizes the merits of their contentions.
