important to have men in office with at least good moral characters. Be cause this is even required of those who would ask for license to sell liquor. It may not be known by all our readers that license to sell liquor cannot be granted to any one who has not a good moral character. But so it stands upon the statute books of North Carolina. Now if we demand men of good moral character to sell whiskey should we not have them in other positions? If we read the signs of the times correctly, the tendency in every political party is to demand pure and honest men for office. consider this great problem: No text in the Bible condemns secrecy, in itself considered, or regard it alone as proof of evil intent or action, (not one). On the contrary, the whole plan of human redemption, the Gospel and its purposed salva-tion, is spoken of as "Mystery (Secret) hid from the ages," and revealed only in these last days. We are also informed that the sacred things belong to God. But these things are revealed and belong to us and to our children forever. Howbeit, these revealed things were once secrets, and even some things now "revealed unto be bies" are yet hidden from the wise and prudent. Says the Book, without which, in the lodge room, no lodge meeting can be held; in the beginning the earth was without form (chaotic) and void (empty) and darkness was upon the face of the deep. In that silence and under that darkness was secreey which no eye saw, no ear heard, no minds apprehended save the omniscient. In the silence and secrecy of that emptiness God's creative and revealing spirit brooded on the face of the waters until the first born of creation came forth at the omnific words "Let there be light." Until then there could be no revelation of the material things the succeeding ways and workings of God.

Unto the present time the keenest pryings of human curiosity have not been able to expose the hidden powers imparted to nature in its various productions. Science, falsely so called, may beast that it has tracked to their primal beginnings man with blackened face, the foun- ten to attract their votes. All these are freely made for the information of the world. But the peculiar process by which our members were indoctrinated so impressively, and the means of recognition y which we are able and enabled to know each other and to work together so effectively; these may not yet be published. They are most useful and beneficial as secrets. When the world at large is prepared to receive and profit by these, and not sooner, we hope that all members of all churches and associations will become Odd Fellows.

Odd Fellowship has not merely a name, but a life. It is living and actual in deeds which accord with its teachings, for it requires of every member self control and self direc tion, subjugation of passion and appetite to reason and the moral powers; self abnegation and self-sacrifice for the good of others ; deeds of mutual aid and effort in seasons of distress and danger ; acts of beneficences to the poor, the sorrowing and the suffering; charity in feeding word and deed to all who need it, as in men cannot (or think they cannot) agree, as well as hearty coworking in all good wherein men are agreed. These are some of the exercises by which members are trained into fuller development of their manhood, their humanity, their fraternity in triendship, love and truth, and their childlike and exalted trust in God.

In addition to the large sum expended yearly for relief, and the amounts accumulated for future use, we again remind the reader that "What's done we partly may compute,

But know not what's prevented," Under our wise and humane system of relief before utter want, what we prevent is far greater than what we cure.
