LABOR WAR AIMS REPORT ADOPTED.

British Congress Accepts Memorandum as Agreed Upon by Committees—Prime Minister Sends Letter.

London, England (Saturday)—Practically unanimously, the delegates at yesterday's labor meetings, representing 3,250 workers, adopted the war aims memorandum drafted by the executive committee of the Labor Party and the parliamentary committee of the Trade Union Congress.

The reading of a letter from the Prime Minister was received in silence, except for an occasional, Hear! Hear!

The Prime Minister's letter stated that a declaration of the Allies' war aims can, of course, only be made in agreement with the other allied nations. The question of issuing a further declaration on this subject is one which is constantly kept in view by the allied governments, but it is not one about which it is possible for the British Government to speak by itself. He had looked forward to an interchange of views on this subject with the delegates appointed by the Russian Government to attend the conference in Paris last month, but the absence of any representatives from Russia made such a consultation impossible.

"I was never more convinced than I am today," wrote Mr. Lloyd George, "not only that the purposes for which the allies are fighting are not imperialistic, or vindictive, but are essential for the future freedom and peace of mankind. The ideals for which we are fighting today are the same as those for which the British Empire entered the war."

The memorandum adopted largely agrees with the draft issued Aug. 10 the most important change being that instead of a demand for the return of Alsace-Lorraine to France it is proposed this should be left to the inhabitants of these provinces to decide upon. This change was made to bring British Socialists into the line with the French Socialists.

The original document was drawn up by sub-committee of the executive committee of the Labor Party, including Mr. Henderson, Mr. J. J. Wardle, new parliamentary secretary to the Board of Trade, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, Mr. F. W. Jowett, Mr. J. H. Roberts, Labor Minister, and Mr. Sidney Webb.

The next important step followed the Trade Union Congress in Blackpool, in September, when a sub-committee of six representatives each of the Labor Party executive committee and the parliamentary committee of the congress, with their respective secretaries, was appointed to consider the possibility of securing an agreement as to the peace and war aims, between the working classes of the allied nations. The Labor Party was represented on this sub-committee by Messrs. Werdle, Ramsay MacDonald, Sidney Webb, Purdie, McGurk, and Hutchinson, with Mr. Henderson as secretary, while the congress parliamentary committee comprised Messrs. Will Thorne, W. H. Thomas, Harry Gosling J. Hill, J. W. Ogden, F. Bramley, and C. W. Bowerman. It is this body which revised the original document on war aims to the form in which it has been adopted.

Mr. Arthur Henderson, who moved the adoption of the memorandum, opened by defining the Labor peace policy under three heads: 1. Essential importance of securing a settlement as speedily as possible, founded on democracy and security. 2. That territorial adjustments must not be dictated by annexationist or imperialist designs, or for political reasons, but in the interests of progressive civilization and world peace. 3. That the trade policy after the war must not be founded on the economic oppression or the commercial isolation of the German people.

Mr. Henderson said that the war, whatever its origin, was now a struggle between the old and the new systems of government in Europe. It was the inevitable offspring of autocracy and its issue, uncontrolled militarism, and aggression, imperialism working through the subterranean channels of secret diplomacy. Faith and confidence in brute force as an ideal instrument for attaining national ambitions, whether right or wrong, must be destroyed.

Secret diplomacy, compulsory military service, profit from the manufacture of war material, must be rendered unnecessary in a society of free nations, Mr. Henderson said. The nation's bond must be given to a settlement by the people, for this is the only way in which future civilization can be provided with adequate and effective safeguards and guarantees.

Freezing Weather halts Water Traffic Movements

Baltimore, Dec. 29.—The coldest weather in Maryland for some years is rapidly closing up navigation on the rivers and portions of the Chesapeake bay. Sailings of all sidewheel steamers of the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic and Delaware and Virginia railway companies were abandoned today and only propeller steamers were permitted to leave on their regular routes. Orders were also issued by the officials to masters of steamers at down-the-bay points to hasten to this port in order to escape a general freeze. A fleet of oyster boats is frozen in on the dredging bars and nearly all sailing crafts are tied up. The ice breaking boats will begin tomorrow to clear the channels for ocean going ships.

In a child that is subject to attacks of croup, the first indication of the disease is hoarseness: Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the Child becomes hoarse and the attack may be warded off and all danger and anxiety avoided.

Warehouse for sale or Rent.

At a meeting of the directors of the Surry County Rry Prize Co., held on December 10, 1917, it was decided to sell the Farmers Warehouse, if a satisfactory price can be secured in the next 30 days. If not sold during this time it will be for rent again for the sale of leaf tobacco exclusively for the next season. Any one wishing to purchase should confer with the President or one of the following directors, W. L. Chilton, F. M. Dobson, or J. Luther Wood, or with the full board at their office on January 10, 1918.

Wives Must not Accompany Fighters to the War Zone.

Base American Flotilla in British Waters, Oct. 26.—An order to American naval officers and men not to bring their wives from the United States has just been issued by the commanding officer of the United States destroyer flotilla operating in European waters. It reads:

"The force commander is of the opinion that it would be very inadvisable for any officer or man of the naval force in European waters to cause their wives to take passage for Europe."

Two American naval officers succeeded in getting their wives to join them before the order was issued. Both were married in April. The next month their husbands received orders to sail for Europe. One wife came from Philadelphia and the other from Boston.

T. G. Fawcett, Cashier.

Those responsible for the prohibition justify it on the grounds of efficiency. One American naval officer of high rank said:

"We must get the maximum of efficiency out of our officers and men. They must be unfettered to go wherever they are sent at any time. We cannot have their wives following them around from one base to another. It may look hard to the thousands of young wives of our naval men, but they must remember that this is war and that they are better off back home where they can be of more use to the nation."

NOTICE OF STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

The regular annual meeting of the shareholders of The First National Bank of Mount Airy will be held in the Banking House Tuesday afternoon January 8th, 1918, at 4 o'clock.

T. G. Fawcett, Cashier.
