Mrs. N. J. Booker Passes Away
Mrs. N. J. Booker, widow of Forester Booker, Sr. died at the home of her son Foster Booker, Jr. Mt. Airy, at 8 o'clock A. M. Aug. 30th.
At the age of 16 she joined the Primitive Baptist church and was a constant, consecrated member throughout her life. Her church membership since her marriage has been at Crooked Oak church. Her country home, Forestwild, located near Mt. Airy, was open to welcome all both strangers and friends. The latch strings was on the outside to the poor and needy and many there were who came for advice, comfort, and help. None were turned away without her blessing. Ministers were always welcome and she never gave up the custom of family worship conducted by these christian guests. She lived the life pictured for the true christian in the beatitudes. She had no foe. It has been said and truly that no one in any walk of life from the highest socially to the lowest of this class had aught to say of her but praise.
Mrs. Booker was the third wife of Forester Booker, Sr., who was one of the most conspicuous characters of civic righteousness and consistent morals in Surry county. He was a promoter of schools, a teacher, the chairman of the County Commissioners which office he held at the time of his death. He was a faithful Mason and master of his lodge.

Mrs. Booker is survived by seven children; Granville Booker, Sunnyside Va., Mrs. Sarah V. Wright, Branson, Mo., Mrs. W. D. Haynes, Mt. Airy, Mrs. Alice Wolfe, Greensboro, and Mrs. L. M. Foust, Greensboro, Forester Booker, Jr., Mt. Airy, and Carrie Booker Atlanta, Ga.
Mrs. Booker was a young girl during the war between the states and had to reap the hardships of the reconstruction period, which she never forgot. When the U. S. entered the world war she joined the Red Cross workers and became one of its most successful knitters of socks, sweaters etc.
Her daughter, Carrie Booker, was called into service of the overseas educational department but the signing of the Armistice prevented her sailing; when the call came for the 18 year old boys she had two grandsons who went into training. Thomas Booker and William Haynes.
When the 18th Amendment was passed she went early to the polls and cast her vote. Since then she has been actively interested in politics of immediate concern voting each time for the best exponent of right and justice in her county representatives.
Mrs. Booker's life was one of self sacrifice, first to her own mother and invalid father, her husband and children, her grandchildren, and to all who needed aid. She walked and talked with God and as a result walked a Godly walk.
The funeral services were conducted at the home by Elder J. D. Vass, her former pastor, Revs. D. Vance Price and Eugene Olive assisting. She was laid to rest Friday afternoon in the cemetery at Mt. Airy in the Booker family lot.
The funeral services were in keeping with her faith and the talk by Elder J. D. Vass was a source of comfort and joy to the family.
Her last resting place was a scene of flowers which were the expressions of love and esteem of both kindred and friends from far and near.
With the passing of Mrs. Booker the family has lost for a time their best friend, the community a loyal and faithful citizen but heaven has gained a saint.
Contributed.

TOKIO WAS ALWAYS IN FEAR OF CATASTROPHE

Returned Missionary Says People Constantly Expected 'Just Such Disaster.'

Atlanta, Sept. 5.—Tokio, Japan's picturesque capital, and its 2,800,000 citizens lived constantly in fear of a disaster which would mean complete destruction, according to Dr. J. C. C. Newton, who returned to Atlanta two months ago after having served 35 years as a missionary in the vicinity of the city, most of which now is a smoking heap of ruins as a result of the earthquake of Saturday.
"Just like the Tokio citizens, I had a feeling that such a disaster was coming some day," said Dr. Newton today. "The Tokio people never ceased to believe in the old myth, which was that a giant fish under the city some day would bring about its destruction."

"When we left Japan recently, Tokio, led by Mayor Goto and his cabinet, was preparing to float bonds and launch millions of dollars worth of municipal improvements. An engineering expert from Washington was co-operating with city authorities, and better streets, a better water supply, improved sanitation and plans to obtain protection from inundation were going forward.
"A river runs through the center of the city, making the situation all the more dangerous. Tokio covers an immense area. The congestion is terrible, and the traffic question gave the authorities worlds of trouble."
"The part of the city where government headquarters were located was strictly modern, with wide paved streets and handsome buildings. Outside this zone the streets, as a rule, were unpaved, the trolley service was poor and living conditions were far from satisfactory.

"Yet, Tokio was one of the first places visited by tourists and they found hundreds of picturesque, interesting things to see in the city and environs.
"Many times, I have been in bed in Tokio when a fire broke out which almost took the city. Again, I have been in the city many times when severe earthquakes occurred, causing great damage.
"Kiobe, 300 miles away, is generally regarded as the safest part of Japan, as far as danger from earthquakes and tidal waves are concerned. I always felt safe there, but not in Tokio.
"A skyscraper in Japan," he remarked, "means a building four or five stories high. And this is too high. In a country that is constantly in danger of an earthquake, the people tempt providence when they erect high buildings."

Dobie-Holmes

The home of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Walker at Flat Rock was the scene of a beautiful marriage ceremony Wednesday evening August 29th at 8 o'clock when their daughter Miss Thelma Dobie became the bride of John W. Holmes.
The marriage took place under a beautiful bridal arch of greenery banked with potted plant at either side, the Rev. Mr. Berry, pastor of the Flat Rock Presbyterian church, officiated using the ring ceremony.
The petite bride was becomingly attired in a costume of Kings blue Canton crepe with silver lace trimmings and harmonizing accessories, she was given in marriage by her step-father, Mr. Walker, and attended by Misses Willis Valentine and Chrissie Thompson. Arthur Monroe served as best man.
Both bride and groom have been employed by the North Carolina Granite Corporation. Mr. Holmes is an Englishman and is well connected in the mother country, the bride is an attractive young woman of Scotch descent, though a native of Mount Airy.
After congratulations the guests were invited into the dining room which was beautifully decorated for the occasion and here elaborate refreshments were served.
In the nuptials and reception were blended quaint English and Scotch customs which were new to many of the guests.
The happy couple left Thursday to spend a brief honeymoon in cities of the state and returning will make their home with the parents of the bride until the new bungalow, being erected for them by the Corporation, is ready for occupancy, which will be about October the first.

No Substitute Offered
Say what you will about druggists offering something "just as good" because it pays a better profit, the fact still stands that ninety nine out of a hundred druggists recommend Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea is asked for and do so because they know from what their customers say of it, that it can be depended upon.
