DRY FORCES IN JUBILEE CONVENTION PROHIBITION LAW

Up to Citizens to Aid Government in Its Campaign of Enforcement to Suppress Criminals

Rivaling the Columbus convention of 1913 in attendance and enthusiasm, the thirty-year jubilee convention held in Washington, D. C., January 12-16 inclusive, sounded a call for law observance and law enforcement, that will be heard to the farthest corner of this nation. The Columbus convention declared for constitutional prohibition, the Thirty-Year Jubilee Convention declared for the strict enforcement of the prohibition amendment to the Constitution.

More than 1,200 accredited delegates were in attendance coming from every state in the Union, and these delegates will carry back to their respective communities the spirit of optimism and the spirit of determination "to see this thing through" which pervaded the convention, from the opening to the closing session.

There were facts presented in abundance to justify the optimism, facts which revealed the marvelous benefits accruing from the prohibition law during these first four years of its application. There were assurances of continued support from veteran leaders who have fought for a score and more years for the enactment of legislation, finally culminating in the ratification of the Eighteenth Article of the Constitution. These leaders have no intention of quitting this fight now that the issue has changed from an issue of prohibition to an issue of law enforcement. Similar assurances came from United States senators, congressmen, governors of states and from other public officials who appeared on the program.

The convention was held in the First Congregational church, the church of which President Coolidge is a member. These addresses and appeals inspired the determination in the hearts of the delegates to continue their fight until all attempts at nullification cease.

Fruits of First Four Years

The first four years of prohibition in spite of the organized resistance of the outlawed liquor traffic, have brought these encouraging results: Over 873,000 lives were saved by the reduction in the death rate during the four years of prohibition, giving to insurance companies a "gain in mortality" of $678,769,000.

The ratio of drunkenness arrests to population has fallen throughout the nation to a point equivalent to 500,000 fewer such arrests in 1923 or a decrease of 2,000,000 in the four dry years.

Penal institutions commitments have decreased, as shown by the lower ratio per 100,000 population, by 20,000 in the four dry years.

Reports from typical charity societies indicate that $74,000,000 is available for constructive welfare work from funds formerly used to care for destitution caused by drink.

Industrial accidents have decreased by a quarter of a million annually, lowering production costs and adding to human values.

The billions of dollars formerly spent destructively for liquor are now turning many mill wheels of industry and business.

Over $5,000,000,000 was expended for automobiles in 1923. Over 4,000,000 new automobiles were made and sold during the year in this country. Alcoholized drivers of these machines would have made our roads into shambles of death if prohibition had not intervened.

Over a billion dollars was added to our savings accounts and over eleven billion dollars to our insurance policies during 1923 alone.

Home building in 1923 averaged 2,000 more homes per month than in 1919, in spite of labor costs.

The churches have known a new Pentecost on each of the 365 days of 1922 adding 2,500 new members per day to their rolls.

High schools and colleges are unable to care for the throngs of youth able to seek higher education since the saloon drain on the family purse has been eliminated.

The outlawing of 177,790 licensed saloons which capped the health, drained the ambition, emptied the purses of their victims, has made possible much of these gains.

Prohibition does not claim the entire credit of all of these results but only a nation that was sober could have experienced this uniform development of all helpful things or the accompanying decrease of the harmful forces.

These are just the first fruits of prohibition. They have come in spite of the imperfections of enforcement. When wet politicians are no longer allowed to place accomplices in positions of power, the propaganda of those who are no longer allowed to include men to violate the Constitution, when law and order are supreme, then in wealth, health, character, power and achievement America will show the world to what heights a self-governing people can rise when freed from the chains of alcohol.

Don't burn the woods trying to kill a few boll weevils. The woods will suffer more than the weevil, says Forrester H. M. Curran of the State College extension service.
