HINT OF DECISION IN FRANKS MURDER

Justice Thought to Have Made Up Mind as to Death or Life Imprisonment.

Chicago, Sept. 4.—Evidently Justice Caverly has reached a decision in the case of Richard F. Loeb and Nathan Leopold, jr. In the Criminal Court building today, when he visited Justice Jacob Hopkins, his successor as Chief Justice of the Criminal Court, Justice Caverly told reporters he will render his decision Sept. 10 according to the program which he announced when the arguments were concluded.

His words were interpreted to mean he had made up his mind whether the two killers of Bobby Franks are to be hanged or imprisoned for life.

"I have read most of the testimony," Justice Caverly said, "and have made notes on it. My decision will be reached from these."

He said he would leave the city for a short rest, but refused to tell his destination, adding that his principal aim was to escape publicity.

Fourth Woman Believed Insane Over Franks Case

Chicago, Sept. 4.—The fourth woman believed to have become insane from brooding over the trial of Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb, slayers of Bobby Franks, was examined at the County Hospital today, according to Dr. J. P. Percival.

She is the wife of a carpenter, who said she has talked and thought of nothing but the Franks trial.

In the event of a hanging decision by Justice Caverly defense attorneys are understood to have under consideration two surprise moves to carry on the battle to save the lives of the slayers.

The first would be a petition in a court of equal jurisdiction, setting forth that the boys have become insane since the trial. The other move would be a motion asking Justice Caverly to consent to substitution of a plea of not guilty, to be followed by trial by jury.

Lawsuit in Old Rome

Carried on 560 Years

A generally little-known region, quite close to Rome, is called the Pontine Marshes. A large quadrangle formed by the foothills of the Alban volcanoes, the Lepine Mountains, by the wooded sand dunes of the coast, and by Mount Circeo, measuring some 150,000 acres of extraordinarily fertile land, is known to history as the Pontine Marshes. The water, hemmed in on all sides, can not flow out.

In olden times the whole land was densely populated and highly productive. Twenty-three towns are supposed to have existed where now one sees not a trace of a single building. The Romans with great daring and with an enormous expenditure of labor, dug right through the dunes at sea level and this gigantic cut, with the sides over a hundred feet high, appears today. The condition of the Pontine land became worse and worse. The water could not find sufficient outlet and during the rainy season inundated large tracts of land.

Each group of inhabitants, therefore, strove principally to divert the waters from their own properties to those of their neighbors. Lawsuits were instituted and wars broke out incessantly in every direction.

The longest lawsuit ever recorded, it is said, resulted. For about 560 years it was carried on, and only ended about 1790. When the decisions of the courts did not suit the people they resorted to arms and many bloody battles were fought.—Exchange.

One Law Less, Anyway.

(From The Cleveland Commercial)

Here is a chance for optimism on the part of those who are worried by the constant expansion of Federal, State and municipal laws. Also, incidentally, it will afford the present-day motorist to breathe a little more freely over the increasing curbs that are being placed on his individual rights.

Out in Denison, Iowa, they have repealed one of the earliest automobile laws passed anywhere in the country and one which for 30 years has held an undisputed place for uniqueness.

This municipal regulator, provided that, "the traveling motorist is ordered to telephone ahead to the next town notify them of his intended arrival, of his probable route through town, and of the length of his intended stay."

It is explained in news dispatches that owners of nervous horses were thus warned in advance of the necessity of being on the lookout for the coming "gas-wagon," then considered in that part of the world as a nuisance.

Oh, hum, anyway, it means one law less, and shows that "the world do move."

THERE'LL BE NO JOINT CANVASS

Republicans in State Have No Issue or Party Record

Raleigh, Sept. 5.—In a statement issued this afternoon Democratic State Chairman John G. Dawson went on record as opposed to a joint discussion with the republicans by Angus Wilton McLean or any other democrat.

The republicans cannot discuss their own party record, and therefore would be forced to an effort to obstruct an honest and open consideration of "matters involved," he set forth, adding that the democratic party record can be better presented to the people when the speaker is "left free from participation in humorous and trivial subjects."

The democratic chairman's attitude was made known to Mr. McLean before the statement was given out for publication. As the nominee has made the acceptance of the debate challenge of Col. I. M. Meekins, his republican opponent, subject to approval by the democratic executive committee, Mr. Dawson's statement serves as a rejection of that proposal or any other challenge that might come from the G. O. P. camp.

His full statement follows:

"It has been the policy of the democratic party to discuss fully before the people the pending issues that an intelligent understanding of matters concerning their interests may be gained; and it has been found and is admitted that such an understanding cannot come from joint discussions, especially when one participant cannot discuss his own party record, and would, therefore, be forced to an effort to obstruct an honest and open consideration of matters in volved."

"That Mr. McLean is conspicuously well qualified to take care of himself in any discussion and to present to the people the great record of his party achievements, achievements unsurpassed in any state in the union, is admitted everywhere, but he can better present, as all other democratic speakers can, this great party record and building of the state under the administration of the democratic party, when left free from participation in humorous and trivial subjects."

This not only applies to Mr. McLean, but applies equally to every other speaker under the auspices of the democratic executive committee. The people want a free understanding of the state's affairs and are not interested in personalities.

"For these reasons I prefer that my party adhere to its well known policy and not participate in joint discussions, such as suggested. I have made my wishes known to Mr. McLean."

Tail of Custer's Horse

Renewed Six Times

(From Cappers' Weekly)

Gen Custer's horse was the only living portion of the Seventh United States Cavalry, with the exception of an Indian scout, who died from injuries to come out of the battle of the Little Big Horn.

Since his death Comanche has had seven tails, all because souvenir hunters, each of whom, visiting the Kansas State University, Museum, has secretly and with much caution stolen a few hairs from the tail of the stuffed remains of Custer's horse.

Whenever Comanche's tail becomes so thin as to appear positively shabby the attendants at the museum deftly remove it and some unknown and defunct horse donates another supply of caudal appendage to the cause of history and the religious faith of the relic hunter.
