Things political in the city's circle have been under speculation for several weeks, with first one name mentioned, then another, for the various offices. But two announcements have been published for the office of chief of police, though there are other aspirants spoken of, and the first announcement for the mayoralty is made today by Mr. Thos. J. M. SPENCER IS STRICKEN

Paralytic Stroke Came on During Night

Mr. J. M. Spencer, one of New Bern's and Craven county's most popular men, was stricken some time in the early hours of this morning with an apopleptic stroke and is reported this evening to be in quite a serious condition.

Mr. Spencer arose this morning as usual and began his morning toilet, but before he had left his room Mrs. Spencer noticed his peculiarities and the unusual manner in which he was going around and spoke to him, but he gave no reply to her questions. He continued with his unusual actions and she directed him to the bed and assisted him in placing himself at the same time speaking to him and endeavoring to get an answer, but he could not answer.

A physician was called and after examination it was found that the patient was suffering with apoplexy. In speaking of the case this afternoon the physician in charge thought that it was yet too soon to state the case any more than to say that his patient was suffering in a considerable degree.

Mr. Spencer is well known in the city as well as in the county, and it will be a matter of sore regret at his unfortunate turn in health. Mr. Spencer conducts one of the largest truck farms in Eastern North Carolina, and has served for several years as county superintendent of the county roads and convict camps of Craven.
