and they know that Walter Clark has been their consistent friend for many years, and they are going to stand by him now. And re-market for cotton; the growing of immense numbers of cattle, horses and hogs in the West creates a market for these animals; the potatoe farmers of Maine and other sections of the country require market accommodations for handling them; the great grain region of the country has its elevators and warehouses; the tobacco growers in different sections of the country require the erection of great warehouses for the marketing of the crop, and this will be found to be true of every product of the farm. Where the production of any commodity is small, and where the surplus is not large enough to make it profitable for some man, or a number of men, to make a business out of the handling of this surplus, and to make money in the business of handling it, it is necessarily thrown on a glutted local market, or allowed to waste on the farm. Take the fruit crop of any community, and the larger portion of it goes to waste, because the local market is not large enough to consume it at a profitable price to the producer, and there is not enough to justify handling it on a large scale. The peach growers of Georgia are making a fortune growing peaches, but there was a time when these peach growers made no money out of their fruit; they handled their fruit on an independent or individual basis, and the cost of transportation was too great for them to realize a profit; there was not sufficient amount of fruit to make large shipments, and when it was proposed to increase the orchards and produce more fruit and for the producers to unite in the marketing, many of the growers laughed at the idea. They said if they could not get good prices for the fruit they were then growing how could they get better prices for more fruit. But the man who was thinking ahead of his time finally persuaded his neighbors go into the Georgia Peach Growers' Association and the balance of the story is well known. The same is true of the grape growers of northern Ohio and New York, of the orange growers of Florida, and the apple growers of Oregon and Washington.

"The producers of a common crop must organize and grow this crop, or it may be truck, or live stock, butter and milk, chickens or eggs, canned goods, or what not, in large quantities, then organize and put the produce on the market in the shape or condition the market wants it, in the quantity the market wants it, in the quality the market wants it, and at a time when the market wants it. Many canneries have failed because they could not ship in large quantities; creameries have failed all over the country because of the small amount of produce handled, and this is true of all enterprises; it is quantity and quality combined that makes a business worth while."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.
