MONDAY & TUESDAY

APRIL 29th - 30th—

WILLIAM HAINES

in

"ALIAS JIMMY VALENTINE"

One of the best of the "sound" pictures to date, with the last part of it in splendidly handled dialogue. LIONEL BARRYMORE has one of the finest voices yet recorded in the talking pictures, and in this he is at his best. Haines' voice is excellent too, as well as the others of the cast. —LEILA HYAMS, KARL DANE and TULLY MARSHALL.

The story centers around Jimmy Valentine, gentleman crook, with particular attention to safe-breaking, who eventually falls in love with the daughter of a small town banker, goes straight, becomes a trusted attaché of the bank, and in a big dramatic moment presents an unbreakable alibi when Detective Doyle confronts him at the bank. And then, his alibi established, he learns that by accident the baby daughter of the bank president is locked in the vault, and no one present knows the combination. What does Jimmy do?

The picture holds the interest from start to finish, with its suspense, drama, and romance. Haines is splendid in the role of the audacious, carefree but likable Jimmy, and he has a fine supporting cast.

Also—Two Vitaphone Acts.

Dorothy Whitmore in a song recital, and Bernardo Pace, the "Wizard of the Mandolin".

And—Pathe News reel (Silent)
