PREVENT WORMY APPLES BY SPRAY

Use Arsenate of Lead After Petals Begin to Fall.

To a codling moth—which is a soft gray little butterfly-like thing—an apple tree has just one use. And that is as a convenience for raising some more codling moths. Your rights in the matter as owner of the tree count for nothing with this narrow-minded pest. It is given up wholly to the idea that the world should be filled with codling moths. And unless you get out your spray-rig at the right time this mania will likely be carried far enough to ruin your chances of nice sound apples.

For every codling moth that comes along about the time the blossoms fall will lay eggs on the tiny little apples that are just forming. And from these the well-known apple worms are hatched—they in turn to become other moths to lay more eggs to make more moths and so on until, if a person didn't step in and gum the game up, he wouldn't have an apple fit to eat.

You do this and save your apples by spraying with arsenate of lead, just after the petals begin to fall—before that, you'll poison the bees which are among your best friends, without doing any more good. The arsenate of lead should be used at the rate of a pound and a quarter to fifty gallons of water. Get it all over the tree—in a fine mist. And don't wait any later than the fall of the petals, for then the tiny apple ends close up with the worm inside safe from the poison.

There are other fruit troubles of a fungous nature—blights and rots—which also begin to develop at this season. To halt these you add lime sulphur to the arsenate of lead. You can buy the prepared form, and this is handiest and just as cheap as making it, especially for a small orchard. It comes either in liquid or powder—of the former add a gallon and a half to each fifty gallons of the spray mixture, and of the latter add four pounds to the same amount.

Immature Twigs Are Too Weak as Scaffold Limbs

One-year-old trees of some kinds, such as the apple and fig, have the form of a straight whip, in which case it is only necessary to remove the top at the desired point. However, trees like the peach, apricot and plum usually have several small, side branches below the point where the top is removed, which must be considered.

The mistake is sometimes made of cutting the longer of such branches back four to five inches from the trunk in an effort to force them into scaffold limbs or of removing them entirely close to the trunk. In the first case, such immature twigs are too weak to form the basis for scaffold limbs. Though one or two may be sufficiently heavy for this purpose, this number alone would make an unbalanced tree. In the second case, if the twigs are cut close to the trunk, basal buds are destroyed which may be needed later for the development of scaffold limbs.

Vineyard Location Has Lot to Do With Grapes

The location of a vineyard often has a lot to do with the quantity of the grapes produced. In a hilly country low spots should be avoided, because they do not provide either the air or the water drainage that is necessary. Pick out the high spots, and the vineyards will not be so apt to suffer from frost damage. In level sections this point is not so marked, but even there the higher spots are more desirable.

Near large bodies of water the temperature does not change rapidly and such sections are usually well adapted to fruit growing because of less damage from late frosts in the spring, and early frosts in the fall.

Horticultural Notes

The young pear trees need pruning quite similar to that of the apple.

Give your fruit trees a dormant spray of lime sulphur before the buds begin to swell.

Prune back the tops of young fruit trees at the time of planting, the degree of pruning differing with the character and habit of growth of the species.

Summer pruning is sometimes practiced in vineyards where the growth is rather heavy. The object of such pruning seems to be the removal of growth that would interfere with cultivation.

It is a pleasing sight as well as a financial asset for the grower to have an orchard of uniform, properly headed trees. This can be obtained only by purchasing young, vigorous trees, which will allow the height of head to be regulated according to a fixed standard.

The Mark of Genuine Aspirin

BAYER ASPIRIN is like an old friend, tried and true. There can never be a satisfactory substitute for either one. Bayer Aspirin is genuine. It is the accepted antidote for pain. Its relief may always be relied on, whether used for the occasional headache, to head-off a cold, or for the more serious aches and pains from neuralgia, neuritis, rheumatism or other ailments. It's easy to identify Bayer Aspirin by the Bayer Cross on every tablet, by the name Bayer on the box and the word genuine printed in red.

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer, Manufacturer of Monocacetic Acid of Salicylic Acid

Thin Children NEED Scott's Emulsion

There's peace in the household guarded by Castoria. Peaceful sleep for Baby. Uninterrupted rest for Mother. For a few drops of pure Castoria will quiet any fretful infant. Or put the little one back to sleep when there's an upset during the night.

Parents, don't try to do without good old Castoria! It isn't fair to the baby! and it makes things hard for you. You can't give Baby medicine meant for grown-ups—or shouldn't! Castoria is the solution. It is always safe. It always does the work. And although it acts as swiftly as an opiate or a narcotic, it contains neither. Castoria is purely vegetable. Give it whenever there's constipation, colic, diarrhea.

No less than five million modern mothers have come to depend on Castoria, for twenty-five million bottles were bought last year! Get yours today; don't wait for some night when it's needed, and the drugstore is closed!

DON'T LET INDIGESTION AGE YOU

Many a young person looks old and haggard through indigestion. The continual pain and discomfort combined with the inability of weakened stomach organs to extract nourishment from food are such a terrible strain that they drive all trace of youth away.

Scot Taught Madison Thrift

President James Madison often referred to the lessons of thrift taught him when a youth by Donald Robertson, a Scotch schoolmaster.

Thrift and banking go hand in hand. Thrift means banking. Banking means thrift.

Thrift and banking are national slogans today.

A Lesson That Must be Learned

There's one lesson which every man or woman who would be a financial success must learn, and that is the lesson of thrift.

The earlier this lesson is learned the better. And lucky are those who learn it in childhood or youth—with a savings account as their textbook.
