FRIDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1897.

Charles A. Dana, editor of the New York Sun, died at his home last Monday, at the ripe age of 78 years. Mr. Dana entered the profession of journalism before the civil war, a young man poor in this world's goods, but with an ambition to climb to fame and fortune. He succeeded to the highest degree in both respects, and has been known for many years as the leading journalist of America. Through his ability and under his personal direction the Sun has not only led its competitors of the metropolitan press, but has held an unique place only possible to the Sun in American journalism. The Sun has never been commonplace, any more than Mr. Dana could be reckoned among ordinary editors. It always had fresh news and ideas, and served them up in its own original way to satisfy the taste of its patrons. In the death of Mr. Dana the country suffers a loss it can ill afford.

Senator Foraker insists that there is no wickedness in the proposed sale of the Union Pacific railroad to a syndicate. Besides, he points out that Grover Cleveland is the bottom of the wickedness.—Boston Herald.

A well known minister sent south to labor among the colored people, was received with many demonstrations of joy. At the first meeting which he held, one colored preacher prayed for him with great earnestness, thus: "O Lord! bless dis yer brudder what's come down from the north to preach de Gospel to us. Noint him wid de kerosene ole of salvation, and set him on fire."—Salvagnadi.

COMMENTS ON PINEHURST.

Echoes from the Recent Visit of the Juniata Valley Editorial Association, of Pennsylvania.

The following comments on our village were clipped from the papers of some of our editorial visitors:

"On Friday morning we arrived at Southern Pines. This is a small town on the S. A. L. It is in the pine timber district, but the best timber near the town has been cut away. It is a new and growing town.

In the afternoon the party was taken to Pinehurst, a new town six miles west of Southern Pines, by electric railroad, passing numerous peach orchards and vineyards, but the fruit season here is past. Pinehurst is owned entirely by Jas. W. Tufts, of Boston, Mass., who several years ago purchased about 7,000 acres of land, and has since erected a number of buildings. Forty odd buildings are there now, and there are at present in course of erection four cottages, a school house, town hall, store building and the hotel is being enlarged. It is a winter resort for invalids and people of leisure. The season opens next month.

The soil in that section of N. C. is a deep, fertile sand, and produces bountifully such products that grow in such soils. That day the party were the guests of Mr. Tufts."—Liverpool Sun.

"In the afternoon the party was taken to Pinehurst, eight miles distant, on the electric cars. This place was founded by James W. Tufts, of Boston, and is also a health resort, it differing from Southern Pines in that at the latter place the cottages are owned by private individuals, while at Pinehurst they are owned and rented by Mr. Tufts. They are furnished complete, even down to the dishcloth, on the best sanitary principles, and rent for from $150 to $250 for the season, the occupants either boarding at the Casino or providing for themselves, as they prefer. While at Pinehurst the visitors were the guests of the proprietor and were kindly treated."—Lewiston Gazette.

"Friday afternoon, as the guests of James W. Tufts, of Boston, the soda water man, the party were taken in electric cars to Pinehurst, six miles away, with pine lands and large and fruitful peach orchards on each side of the road. Pinehurst, like Southern Pines, is a winter health resort, located in the heart of the long leaf pine region of North Carolina. The owner of the town is Mr. Tufts, who has spent a large sum in laying it out, and providing it with a magnificent hotel, boarding houses, casino, school, electric light plant, and a number of pretty cottages which can be rented for $150 to $250 during the season from November 15 to May 1. The terms at the Holly Inn are $3 a day. No land is sold, for the reason that the ideal results at which the owner aims can be assured in no other way. No liquors are sold. The object is to obtain an orderly and refined class of guests who cannot pay high prices for accommodations, and it is gratifying to note that the project of the founder of the unique village met with such success last season in the number of patrons that he is enlarging and improving the inn, and extending the number of cottages. Pinehurst is not a sanitarium for invalids, but a health resort for the weary and overworked."—Huntington Daily Local News.
