FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1897.

At the next session of Congress in December a bill will undoubtedly be introduced providing for postal saving banks throughout the United States. In view of the fact that such banks are in use in nearly every civilized country in the world and have proved to be a great public benefit in every case, it is surprising that Congress did not provide for postal savings banks in this country years ago.

It is understood that the only opposition to the establishment of postal savings banks comes from the banking interests in the North and East, where the country is thickly settled and savings banks chartered by the state are so numerous that the necessity for additional banking facilities is not so keenly felt as in the South and West where the conditions are exactly the reverse, the country being thinly settled and banks of any kind few and far between. Private banks in which the people have little confidence are about the only places in which a poor man can deposit his little surplus, and even these are mostly out of reach.

We fully believe that postal savings banks should be established for the benefit of the people of the whole country, and coincide in the opinion of ex-Postmaster General Wanamaker, as given in his annual report for 1891, where he says in part:

The reports of 36,598 postmasters state that the distance of savings banks from post offices varies from a few feet to hundreds of miles, and the actual average of distance in 1876 out of 2,807 counties in the United States is 28 miles. As the post-office is within easy walking distance of the home of every man, woman, and child, so would the place of deposit for savings be equally accessible and convenient.

The establishment of postal savings banks would also enable the government to refund the national debt with the money deposited by the people, and thus in the course of time place the whole debt in the hands of our own citizens, where it should have been since the first debt was created.

The Holly Inn Orchestra.

Among the many new attractions at the Holly Inn the present season is the orchestra. The managers of the Inn, Messrs. Atwood & Sise, have spared no effort to provide for their guests an orchestra of talented young men who have already made themselves known in the musical world. Frank Edward Lindsey, the leader, is a young man who for some years was the popular pianist and musical director of the famous McGibney Concert Company, and who will be remembered as the genial entertainer at the Inn during the past two seasons. The other members are E. Royal Ellis, L. Stanley Redding, and Fred J. Pool. Mr. Ellis, violinist, has for several years past been a valuable member of Boston's best orchestras; L. Stanley Redding, clarinetist, is a member of the American Watch Co.'s band, and during the past five years has played in orchestras at North Conway and Mt. Vernon, N. H., and Fred J. Pool of West Medford, Mass., is a promising young musician and solo cornetist of the Medford Military band.

The opening concert of the season was given last Saturday evening, the following excellent program being rendered:

Overture, Orpheus,	Offenbach
Intermezzo, Russe,	Franko
Opera selection, Der Vogelhandler,	Zeller
Piano solo, Sonata Pathetique,	Beethoven
	Frank Edward Lindsey.
Waltz, Robin Hood,	De Koven
March of the Marines,	Brook

The morning and evening concerts will be given during the entire season in the large music room of the Inn, and musical entertainments will also be given in the Village Hall from time to time, for the benefit of all Pinehurst guests.

The members of the orchestra have already shown what they are capable of doing, and have proved themselves gentlemen to all with whom they have come in contact, and the Holly Inn has the good fortune to possess an orchestra second to none and in line with the other attractions at the Inn the present season.

Wellsite.

The American Journal of Science describes a new mineral from North Carolina, which has just been investigated by the collector, Mr. Pratt, of Yale University, and by H. W. Foote. It is closely related to harmotome and also resembles it very much in appearance. The crystals are very minute, white, translucent to transparent, and closely set in druses on a heavy white gargue. It is entirely new and distinct in crystallization and composition, making an important but rare addition to mineralogy.—Popular Science News.

Hertford on the Perquimans river, in eastern North Carolina, boasts the possession of the only floating bridge supported by air-tight whiskey barrels.—Popular Science News.
